Nye Assailed As Senators Leave Arms Investigation

Pope and George Charge Him With 'Smearing' Wilson, Lansing.

Connally Declares Inquiry Infamous

Will Seek to Stop Further Funds; Chairman Denies Malice.

By Felix Bruner.

A tornado of protest and resentment over the tactics of the Senate Munitions Committee, described as "smearing" the memory of dead men and impugning the motives of the United States in entering the World War, swept both the Senate and the committee yesterday.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, and Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, members of the committee, withdrew from participation in the hearings as a protest against the manner in which they were being conducted.

In the Senate, Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, in a heated speech, denounced the tactics of the committee as "infamous."

The protests resulted from the statement by Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, in the hearing Wednesday that Woodrow Wilson had "falsified" when he made a reputed statement that he knew of no secret treaties made by the allies in the early part of the war until he went to the Paris peace conference.

Calls Charges Infamous.

Referring to this statement and a similar statement about Robert Lansing, war-time Secretary of State, Connally said:

"I do not care how the charges were made; they are infamous. Some checker-playing, beer-drinking back room of some low house is the only place fit for the kind of language the Senator from North Dakota, the chairman of the committee—this man who is going to lead us out toward peace—puts into the record about a dead man—a great man, a good man, and a man who, when alive, had the courage to meet his enemies face to face and eye to eye."

During the Senate debate it was revealed that the committee already had spent $124,600 of the $125,000 appropriation made for the investigation. Connally said that he would use every effort to prevent a further appropriation and to block payment of any bills above the regular appropriation.

The protests broke in the committee and in the Senate simultaneously. In the committee room the hearing was droning along when Pope quietly entered and took a seat at the committe table. At the first opportunity he interrupted to read a statement signed by both himself and George. The latter was not present.

Degenerated Into Attacks.

The objectives outlined in the resolution authorizing the investigation, the statement said, were to inquire into the practices of manufacturers, sellers and distributors of arms, munitions and implements of war, to investigate existing legislation and treaties in the regulation and control of the traffic in munitions and to recommend additional legislation. The Senators said they favored appropriate legislation to control or regulate munitions traffic.

"During the major part of the committee's inquiry," Pope read, "it has conformed to the statutory limits of its jurisdiction and has been of untold value to the people of the United States.

"It appears now, however, that the investigation has degenerated into an attack upon our wartime President, Woodrow Wilson, and his Secretary of State, Robert Lansing. No word that we can say will add to the greatness of President Wilson, the genuine sincerity of the man, his honesty of purpose, his unusual personal integrity, and his life-spending effort in behalf of his native land, but we must express our resentment at any effort to impugn the motives of Woodrow Wilson and to discredit his great character."

J. P. Morgan, George Whitney and Thomas W. Lamont, partners in J. P. Morgan & Co., listened intently as Pope continued his statement. They had been testifying in the interminable and dreary inquiry into financial transactions preceding entry of the United States into the war.

"The chairman of the committee," Pope continued, "is quoted in the press as making the charge that President Wilson and Secretary Lansing were falsifiers. Just what this has to do with an investigation of the munitions industry under the terms of the resolution it is not possible for us to see.

Disclose Bias and Prejudice.

"The purpose of the investigation is being lost sight of and the chance to secure enactment of remedial legislation is rapidly disappearing. Such efforts to disparage Wilson and Lansing, however, do disclose the bias and prejudice with which the investigation is being carried on.

"We will take no part in such performance. We are emphatically not interested either in head hunting or using an instrumentality of the United States Senate to promote bias, prejudice or animus of any member of the committee.

"We repeat, there is the most urgent need for the munitions investigation and remedial legislation. Whenever this committee realigns

AAA May Be Replaced By Soil Act of 1935

Drive For Amended Law Is Expected After White House Conference; McNary Move for 300 Million Approved.

The building of a new farm program structure on the ruins of the fallen AAA moved forward rapidly yesterday in a day jammed with the following developments:

1. A White House conference, with Congressional leaders and Agriculture Department and AAA chiefs attending, ended with indications that the Administration will drive toward amending existing statutes, probably the soil conservation act of 1935, as a substitute for AAA.

2. Quick action started a $300,000,000 Congressional appropriation to pay farmers signing 1935 adjustment contracts swiftly on its way toward enactment. Introduced by Senator Charles L. McNary, Oregon Republican, in the Senate Agriculture Committee, the measure was quickly approved, together with a bill sponsored by Senator Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina Democrat, which would provide $80,000,000 for seed and feed loans for 1936 crops.

3. Senator Richard B. Russell, jr., Georgia Democrat, introduced a resolution which would suspend the ginning tax on cotton under the Bankhead cotton control act, criticizing a "program of mandatory control of production without the farmers being permitted the benefit payments from the Treasury for the reduction in the production of this commodity." The resolution, in effect, would nullify the Bankhead act, it was said.

4. The National Agricultural Conference, which leaders said represents 3,000,000 American farmers, and composed of five major farm groups, gathered in Washington amid leaders' predictions that the meet would "blow up," and began the attempt to reconcile all groups around the seven-point Administration program adopted by 100 farm-group chiefs at the conference called last week by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace.

5. The AAA announced that the ruling of Comptroller General John R. McCarl clarifying the status of appropriations for administrative expenses of the AAA "assured continuance" of marketing agreements and orders, removal of surplus farm products, increasing export markets and disease eradication in dairy and beef cattle.

Out of these crowded hours observers drew these deductions:

That the Administration apparently plans to expand the soil conservation act of 1935, which is supposedly unassailable constitutionally, into a permanent program em-

450 at Dinner Demand D. C. Crime Board

Citizens Support Plan and Urge Immediate Steps Be Taken.

Two Score Civic Groups Represented; Baker and Others Talk.

A group of 450 Washington citizens, assembled last night to discuss the feasibility of a District crime commission, enthusiastically demanded the committee which brought them together immediately take steps toward formation of such a commission.

Representing two score civic organizations, the dinner gathering at the Hotel Mayflower took its action after hearing Newton D. Baker, James M. Hepbron and Justin Miller describe activities of similar commissions in Cleveland and Baltimore and emphasize the community's responsibility in prevention and control of crime.

Eugene Meyer, who presided in his capacity as chairman of the dinner committee, accepted the group's mandate that the former body move to establish the commission after it had been agreed upon the floor that those members who wished not to serve might be excused.

Baker outlined the origin, problems and accomplishments of the Cleveland Association for Criminal Justice, of which he is president. Returning to his home city in 1921 after having served in President Wilson's Cabinet as Secretary of War, he found a crime survey under way. It was this study, which uncovered a multitude of evils in criminal administration, that ultimately led to creation of the combative association he now heads, said Baker.

Favors Community Chest Aid.

Holding that a crime commission should be financed by the city's community fund or chest, the former Cabinet member said this policy formerly was followed in Cleveland. Because of funds scarcity, the criminal justice association was dropped as a Cleveland Community Fund unit several years ago and at the present time it is kept going by private subscriptions, the speaker declared.

Describing methods and procedure, Baker told how the Cleveland Association for Criminal Justice keeps detailed records of every criminal in the city, co-operates with all agencies interested in offenders from the time of arrest until completion of the probationary period, makes its data available to bench and bar and, in general, takes initiative in criminal administration reforms.

"The greatest obstacle to the administration of criminal justice," said Baker, "is public sympathy for the lawbreaker. As between the arresting officer and the offender, the sympathy is with the latter."

He warned that this is only one of the many discouraging barriers which a crime commission must face. There is the evil of trial continuances, one after another. The Cleveland association keeps records of these. Bulletins issued as the occasion arises keep the public informed on this and other obstacles to prompt justice.

Prisoner Parole Problem.

Inefficient dispensation of parole to prisoners was cited as another crime association problem. Congested prison conditions have resulted in wardens demanding more and more inmates be paroled so room could be made for newcomers.

"We have been a powerful aid to public agencies," said Baker, in his recapitulation, "and public opinion has become more wholesome and just as a result of the association's activities."

Managing director of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission, Hepbron strongly urged that the meeting act immediately to set up a District commission after he had produced statistics purporting to show that Washington is far behind Philadelphia and Baltimore in the matter of swift and sure administration of justice.

He told how the Baltimore organization was founded in 1922 in

Vote on Bonus Due in Senate By Tomorrow

Decks Cleared for Final Debate; Morgenthau Report Revealed.

By Robert C. Albright.

Despite statements by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, declining to predict what will happen to the Government bond market if the bonus is passed, and leaving a clear implication of needed new revenues, Senate leaders cleared decks for debate on the bonus today.

Morgenthau's guarded testimony before the Senate Finance Committee was made public as the Senate by unanimous consent made the coalition "baby" bond payment bonus bill its business for today. A vote today or tomorrow, with passage certain, was forecast by sponsors.

Although Morgenthau had asked that his testimony not be published, because possible "misinterpretation" might be "very adverse on the Government's credit," printed copies of what he had to say were shown to the press as the bonus movement forged forward.

Morgenthau Warning.

"Since Monday a week ago (the day of the Supreme Court's AAA ruling), I do not think anybody in the United States can say what the picture is going to be," the Treasury Secretary told the committee, when asked what effect a bonus bond issue might have on the Government bond market.

"So many things have happened that affect the Treasury, that I certainly am not smart enough, and I haven't met anybody who is smart enough, who can say what is the future of the Government bond market."

Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, asked if it wasn't a "safe assumption" that bonus passage, on top of the AAA ruling, "would not help the bond market."

"That is a safe assumption," said Morgenthau.

Senators made repeated efforts to bring out testimony on the need for new tax legislation, but Morgenthau, while insisting the President had not closed the door to new taxes, said that was something for Congress to decide, and refused to take a stand.

Tax Problem Cited.

But once he shot back at Senator Josiah Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina:

"Are you going on the assumption that Congress is not going to pass any new taxes to meet this expenditure?"

Bailey said the President, in his message to Congress, had said there need be no new taxes.

"What the President said," Morgenthau replied, "if I remember correctly, was that no new taxes would be necessary if no new leg-

Hoover Brands Administration Danger to U. S.

Farmers in 'Quicksand,' He Says in Speech at Lincoln.

Text of Hoover's Speech Page 10

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 16.—Former President Herbert Hoover declared tonight that a "new road must be built by which agriculture can get back onto solid ground from the quicksand of the New Deal."

Assailing the Roosevelt Administration's farm relief measures as an application of a "system of scarcity" hostile to the free American spirit, the Republican leader in his first address since the Supreme Court scuttled the AAA said:

"Right at the outset let us get something perfectly clear. There is a farm problem.

"It concerns the entire Nation; the happiness of 7,000,000 homes. Our country will not have reached either moral or economic stature until confidence and hope shine in these homes.

"The problem is still unsolved."

To a crowded auditorium at the University of Nebraska Coliseum, with 10,000 seating capacity, the former President assured his listeners there were "aids to recovery extended to farmers both at home and abroad which have been successful."

Grouping what he termed these tested measures, he listed them as:

First, an increase in consumption of food by restoration of employment.

Second, retirement of submarginal lands where people can not make a living and the retardation of new reclamation projects until additional land can be used.

Third, the encouragement of co-operative marketing and marketing agreements which contribute to prevent gluts in the flow of commodities.

"The farm credit machinery established by the Republican Administrations and improved by the New Deal should be still further improved," he said in this connection.

"But beyond these measures," the former Chief Executive continued, "this farm situation is now one where still further emergency measures pending general economic recovery are necessary. We shall need to open our minds to further experiment."

He suggested that instead of trying to find a balance in agriculture only by curtailing a crop, some substitute should be speeded which would find a ready market, improve the fertility of the soil, and cut down the quantities of agricultural products the Nation now has to import.

"If we include this suggestion with the policies I have already mentioned which would recover our lost acres from foreigners," he con-

Hopes for Ellsworth Revived As Polar Ship Sights Plane

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 16.—Hopes that Lincoln Ellsworth and Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, missing for nearly two months, are safe in Little America soared tonight with receipt of a message from the rescue ship Discovery II that it had sighted an airplane and a man.

Neither the airplane nor the man, seen on the Bay of Whales, was identified.

An official of the colonial office said it presumed that the man must of necessity be either Ellsworth or Hollick-Kenyon, his Canadian co-pilot, since "no other persons are known to be in that vicinity."

"Norwegian whalers frequent the Bay of Whales, but never left any men ashore," the official added. "Besides, the whalers are not equipped with an airplane."

One word of the wireless message from the captain of the Discovery II, sent into the search jointly by the British and Australian governments, was not decipherable and a repetition was ordered. This would take 12 hours or longer.

The committee in charge of the Discovery II's rescue expedition gave out this statement:

"A message has been received by the Discovery committee from the master of the Discovery II reporting that the boat arrived safely at the Bay of Whales at 10 p. m. January 15. The message indicates one man was sighted from a plane and also a machine at Little America."

Sydney, New South Wales (Friday), Jan. 17 (AP).—The Australian minister of defense announced tonight the receipt of a message from the captain of the Discovery II, rescue ship seeking the missing explorer Lincoln Ellsworth, that attempts would be made to take aboard a man sighted.

Hauptmann Given Reprieve, Assured Eight Weeks of Life; Hoffman Faces Ouster Move

Governor's 30-Day Stay Comes After Supreme Court Kills Plea.

Cellmates Roar At News of 'Break'

Only New Evidence Can Save Doomed Man; All Up to Trenchard.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted Lindbergh baby killer, was saved temporarily from the electric chair late today by a 30-day reprieve from Gov. Harold G. Hoffman.

It came only 29 hours before the hour of execution.

"I am granting a reprieve," the Governor said, "for divers reasons which I do not care to discuss at this time."

The reprieve, though only for 30 days, actually assures Hauptmann of at least eight more weeks of life and perhaps three months, due to the fact it will be necessary to resentence him. The law specifies that the execution date must be set for not less than four weeks or more than eight weeks from the date of resentencing.

Gov. Hoffman acted soon after the United States Supreme Court, in a one-sentence decision by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, denied Hauptmann's appeal for a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of execution.

There will be only the one reprieve, "unless the evidence should warrant" another, the Governor said. If Hauptmann is to be finally saved it must be through the presentation of sufficient evidence to warrant Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who sat at Flemington, granting a request for a new trial or for a new plea for clemency to the State pardons court.

The Governor announced his decision in his office shortly after talking with Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, who presumably had called upon him to plead for her husband's life.

No Formal Statement.

There was no formal statement by the Governor, who spoke extemporaneously. He said:

"The attorney general and I have been in conference on this matter, and I have decided to announce a reprieve of 30 days.

"We have agreed that this will not be challenged.

"It is my intention to grant only this one reprieve. There will be no further reprieve.

"I am giving this reprieve for divers reasons which I do not care to disclose at this time. It is an act of executive clemency, and there can be no extension of the reprieve unless the evidence should warrant it.

"No formal request was made to me to take this action.

"There is plenty of precedent for the action I am taking.

"I will send a formal notice of the reprieve to Col. Mark O. Kimberling (principal keeper of the State prison) within the next half-hour."

A delay in preparation of the reprieve order, however, caused the Governor to leave his office before signing it. It will be signed early tomorrow, it was said.

Prisoner Says "Thank You."

Hauptmann received word of his new lease on life from two of his attorneys—C. Lloyd Fisher and Frederick A. Pope.

Pope quoted the condemned man as saying "thank you," as his face lighted up, and he asserted he was "sure something would happen" to prevent the execution.

The "grape-vine" carried the news quickly throughout the big prison.

The inmates lifted their voices in shouts:

"Hauptmann! Hauptmann!"

"Reprieve! Reprieve! Reprieve!"

They beat upon the cell doors and the noise spread swiftly from cell block to cell block. Finally it diminished and faded out.

The Governor made the announcement standing in the outer office of his suite—the office in which last Saturday the court of pardons convened in the meeting that denied clemency to Hauptmann.

Beside him as he spoke stood Attorney General David T. Wilentz, his political adversary and the man who prosecuted Hauptmann at Flemington, and Anthony M. Hauck, jr., Hunterdon (Flemington) County prosecutor.

Gov. Hoffman, serious-faced, paused until the room—filled with newspapermen—became quiet. Before him on the long table was a newspaper, a black headline about the Hauptmann case glaring up at

Supreme Court Refuses Plea Of Hauptmann

Moves in U. S. Tribunals to Save Doomed Man Believed Exhausted.

The Supreme Court of the United States yesterday refused to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann from the electric chair. In a one-sentence verdict, pronounced by bearded Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, the highest court of the land turned aside a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, thus virtually closing all doors of legal escape for the convicted slayer of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's child.

An hour later, however, Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, acted to snatch the German carpenter from the death chamber, already prepared for his execution tonight, and granted him a 30-day reprieve. The action here yesterday, which halted for a few moments the regular proceedings of the court, appeared last night to be the last that counsel for the condemned man can take in the Federal courts.

The month's delay by the Jersey Governor, however, will permit Hauptmann's attorneys again to consider the petition for habeas corpus refused yesterday. There were no indications in the Capital last night that defense lawyers contemplated any such move. The writ was denied yesterday in emphatic manner by the solemn Chief Justice, who had allowed Attorney Neil Burkinshaw personally to present his last-minute appeal just after the opening of court.

Immediately after the luncheon recess Chief Justice Hughes interrupted counsel for another case and from his chair on the high, long bench pronounced his solemn verdict to a crowded room tense with anticipation:

"In the matter of Bruno Richard

Kipling in Coma; Chances "Faint"

London (Friday), Jan. 17 (UP). Rudyard Kipling lapsed into a coma at 1 a. m. today in an apparently losing fight following Monday for a perforated abdominal ulcer, it was announced at Middlesex Hospital at 4:30 a. m.

Mrs. Kipling and their daughter, Mrs. Elsie Bambridge, who were summoned hastily early today, remained at the writer's bedside throughout the night.

Dr. A. E. WebbIJohnson, abdominal specialist, who performed the operation, rested in a room adjoining the patient's. At 2:40 a. m. Dr. Webb-Johnson said:

"Mr. Kipling has a very faint chance, but it is so faint I hardly dare call it a chance."

Ashcraft Guilty In Son's Killing; Faces 1-15 Yrs.

After less than five hours' deliberation, a jury of 12 men late last night found David Ashcraft, crippled news vendor and confessed slayer of his 5-year-old son, guilty of manslaughter.

The verdict carries a sentence of from 1 to 15 years. Shortly before 11 p. m. the venire reported to court officials it had reached a decision in the case of the paralyzed and bent little man, who for four days has been on trial, charged with murder. The killing occurred in the cheerless basement home of the Ashcrafts at 227 Third street northwest.

Throughout Justice Daniel O'Donoghue's charge to the jury, Ashcraft glanced furtively at the bench, where the white-haired magistrate sat. The jury had heard the story of how Ascraft had held his 5-year-old son, David, over a gas stove until he was dead, last September 12.

With the grimace of a child with a new gadget, he played petulantly with the gaudy yellow necktie he had worn around his neck throughout the trial.

Most of yesterday afternoon was spent by the Government and the defense in their final arguments to the jury.

As the foreman rose to announce

Hoffman Faces 2-Party Move For His Ouster

Reprieve Brings Impeachment Demand; Action Due in Legislature.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16.—A move to impeach Gov. Harold G. Hoffman probably will be started in the New Jersey General Assembly Monday night, a responsible sources said tonight.

Political opponents of the Republican Governor are expected to seize on his action in reprieving Bruno Richard Hauptmann, which immediately stirred violent criticism, as a basis for impeachment proceedings.

Although no member of the assembly would comment for publication, a source close to legislative leaders said that an impeachment resolution probably would be introduced when the assembly reconvenes Monday night, and, if not then, "it is certain to come before the 30-day reprieve which the Governor granted Hauptmann today expires."

Newspaper Attacks Him.

Impeachment was urged by the Trenton Evening Times today in a front-page editorial charging that Gov. Hoffman has "disgraced the State and converted New Jersey into an international laughing stock."

Assemblyman Blyman Crawford Jamieson (Democrat), who on December 9 initiated criticism of the Governor's interest in the Hauptmann case by describing it as "nothing but exploitation of this celebrated crime for the purpose of gaining national publicity," would not reveal tonight what part he might play in the threatened impeachment proceedings.

"I have nothing to say at this time," Jamieson replied to all questions.

House Is Hostile.

If an impeachment resolution is introduced in the Assembly, the Speaker of the House would appoint a committee to investigate. If the report recommended impeachment proceedings, and if it should be adopted by the House, the Senate would act as a trial court. The House membership includes 18 Democrats and 42 Republicans. Hoffman is a Republican, but a bloc

Catholic Church Orders Pupils From Mexican Socialist Schools

Archbishops Forbid Parents to Permit Their Children to Attend Institutions, Point to New Dispute of Clergy and State.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Jan. 16.—The Roman Catholic Church, making its most outspoken attack upon the government's socialistic education program, in a pastoral letter today forbade members to allow their children to attend socialistic schools.

This open defiance of the government created a possibility of a new dispute between the church and state.

The pastoral letter, signed by all archbishops in Mexico, asserted:

"No Catholic can be a Socialist, understanding for socialism any system which neither recognizes the rights of God and the church nor the rights of all men to possess goods acquired by legitimate work or inherited."

It instructed parents, teachers and priests to provide children with religious education and appealed to those who are able to aid the church financially in this work.

Government spokesmen were not available for comment. Church officials refused additional statements, referring questioners to the text of the letter.

In reply to a previous pastoral letter last fall the government declared socialist education was not anti-religious, since it did not teach any specific religion but "left the choice of religion to the child."

At the same time the government asserted Catholics would be permitted to give religious instruction in their homes and churches, but in no other places.

Socialist education was made compulsory in December, 1934.

The latest letter, in defiance of those limitations, instructed parents "under the penalty of committing a mortal sin which can not be absolved" to refuse to send their children to socialistic schools and to remove them if they are already enrolled.

The pastoral letter was signed by Monsignor Pascual y Diaz, Archbishop of Mexico, eight other archbishops and 30 bishops. It will be read in all Catholic churches of Mexico Sunday.

The letter concludes: "The church can again transform our country and will do so, with God's blessing, if Catholics fulfill their duty."

Grayson 'Arrested' in Hospital; Doctors Express Fear for Life

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 16.—John Coke Grayson, former Treasury Department official, was under arrest tonight on charges that connected him with the failure of the Park Savings Bank in Washington, but his trial in the District Supreme Court seemed as remote as ever.

His "cell" was a room in the University of Virginia Hospital and there were no guards.

Edward C. Garrard, the deputy United States marshal who was sent here by the Federal court at Roanoke to arrest Grayson, said the warrant had been served but that the former chief clerk in the office of the national bank examiner in Washington, seemed to him to be suffering from heart trouble.

"He seemed to be suffering severely and he had his hand on his heart," the officer reported.

Garrard read the warrant to Grayson in the presence of Dr. J. Carroll Flippin, Grayson's physician. The patient, he said, "made no response."

Garrard returned to Roanoke. He said Grayson would be permitted to appear in court on his own recognizance when able. He said no guard would be required.

Physicians, however, expressed doubt that Grayson "ever will leave the hospital." They refused to permit reporters and photographers to talk with Grayson or to be present when the warrant was served.

Grayson is alleged to have informed Robert S. Stunz, former vice president of the bank, when bank examiners were preparing to visit the institution, thereby enabling Stunz to conceal large shortages. Stunz committed suicide shortly before discovery of a shortage alleged to be more than $1,000,000.

Vote on Bonus Due in Senate By Tomorrow

Decks Cleared for Final Debate; Morgenthau Report Considered.

islation was passed. That is what he said."

Bailey asked why Congress was "not compelled" to raise the money.

"I don't know," Morgenthau retorted, "until I know what Congress is going to do—whether they are going to pass the appropriation and whether they are going to pass any new legislation."

Bailey asked if Morgenthau hadn't put himself "in the position of saying that if we do pass the bonus, sound policy and consistency with the President's plan would require that we levy new taxes."

"I did not say that today," Morgenthau replied.

"No, but the implication was that," Bailey insisted.

Earlier, the tall, sharp-featured Secretary had pointed out that if $2,000,000,000 was allowed for the bonus, $2,316,000,000 for relief, without considering the $1,000,000,000 in invalid processing taxes on which refunds may be sought, the public debt by the end of the next year might climb to $35,500,000,000. He had said the Government's financing operations in the next 17½ months might total $11,300,000,000, taking into consideration $5,500,000,000 in new obligations swollen by the bonus, and $5,800,000,000 in refunding operations.

Word on Debt.

The $35,500,000,000 probable debt figure does not include contingent liabilities, the Secretary said.

"Contingent liabilities are $4,530,000,000," said Senator Bailey. "You add the contingent to the $35,000,000,000 and you have $39,000,000,000 in prospect, including contingent liabilities."

"Mr. Bell, (acting Budget Director) says the contingent liabilities are backed by assets, such as mortgages, etc.," Morgenthau replied.

"On that point," said the North Carolina Senator, "I agree with you, but if we take any step that shakes the Government or destroys its credit, those securities would be worthless."

Morgenthau — "Well, I don't know——"

Reply by Bailey.

Bailey—"Of course, none of us know, but we do know very well that if the Government's credit is destroyed the banks themselves have got our paper, and, of course, we know there would be another liquidation; there would be a total collapse. Then your RFC, the Home Owners Loan and Federal Housing will have to deal with a situation in which there is either no cash or so much cash that the money is worthless."

Explaining why it was impossible for him to say what effect bonus payment in bonds might have on the Government market, Morgenthau testified:

"This whole question of Government credit is such a delicate thing. One day there is confidence, and the people who buy bonds are with you, and then overnight something happens and they won't buy.

Rates Are Discussed.

"Now I have been in the Treasury for a little over two years. The first money I borrowed for a period of one year cost 2¼ per cent, but now I can borrow money for one year at ⅜ of 1 per cent. I am telling about something that is so delicate that you cannot explain it. Suddenly the people have confidence in the Government. They will loan you nine months' money for 0.10 per cent, the way we are borrowing it this week on Treasury bills.

"To come back to your first question on the subject of the bonus, there are too many things interrelated, and I am not smart enough to answer your original question. I am just trying to paint the whole picture as I see it."

The North Carolinian asked what would happen if the Government could not sell its $11,300,000,000 in bonds next year.

"The minute you cannot raise the money required to finance the Government, that minute you will have complete chaos," Morgenthau said, adding later that he meant "financial chaos."

Morgenthau's Question.

Senator Thomas P. Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, wanted to know what revenues were estimated for next year. Morgenthau said original revenue estimates for next year were $5,654,000,000, but these would have to be revised because of the Supreme Court's ruling. The Secretary referred to the President's budget as "an honest budget."

"Every single item is in it," he said, "including the kitchen stove. I don't care who says it, that is an honest budget."

He said that since the Supreme Court ruling, the Treasury estimates it will have to raise $1,000,000,000 in new funds, between now and July 1, adding this would not allow for refunds of processing taxes, if these were ordered by the courts.

Of the total public debt, Morgenthau quoted Bell as saying that "between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000 is recoverable."

Bailey, Gore, Couzens and Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, pressed questioning of the witness.

Bailey Joins Couzens.

Once Bailey observed:

"I believe you will go along with me to this extent, that if we keep taking the pitcher to the well too often, we will come back sometime with no water in it."

"If you do not mind, sir," Morgenthau replied, "I would rather let you make the statement than have it come from me."

At the outset of the hearing, Bailey joined Couzens in objecting to keeping Morgenthau's testimony confidential.

"I am not bound to keep any Government facts secret," said Couzens, "if I determine or desire to do otherwise. * * * I believe it is in the public interest, and I think the public should be advised. I will not sacrifice my opinion for the benefit of any individual, or party, or Government department."

In Multiples of $50.

The new bonus bill, which precipitated the Morgenthau questioning, would pay the bonus in non-negotiable bonds in multiples of $50, which could be immediately cashed for face value, or held for nine years at accumulating interest. The bill passed by the House last week would authorize immediate payment in bonds.

Early yesterday, Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, asked permission to call up the Senate bond-payment measure, but Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary objected that Senators had not had time to study it. By unanimous consent, the debate went over until today. A vote late this evening is possible, leaders said.

Amendments to be proposed today range from highly inflationary proposals by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, to a proposal by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, to pay only the cash surrender value of bonus certificates. Harrison claims the strength to pass the bill without substantial amendments.

Hoover Violates Rules In Political Game—Admits Error And Credits Opponents.

IN STRONG contrast to the "unprincipled brigands" speech in New York of James A. Farley—now becoming known as "Scowling Jim"—was the address on agriculture at Lincoln, Nebr., last night by former President Herbert Hoover.

In the first place, Mr. Hoover violated two rules of the political game—rules which assert: Never admit error—never credit your opponent with anything worthwhile. The former President did both. He asserted that in establishing the AAA the New Dealers "repeated each mistake of the Farm Board and added a big idea." Subsequently he asserted that "the farm credit machinery established by Republican Administrations and improved by the New Deal should be still further improved."

Such candor is heresy, although very refreshing. Now that Mr. Hoover has admitted that one of his policies was sour and that the New Deal has done one good job, why would it not clarify the atmosphere for President Roosevelt to concede that not all Hoover policies led to ruin and desolation and to confess, which is much more important, that several of his efforts to aid the country deserve all the criticism that has been heaped on them?

But that, perhaps, is asking too much. At all events, the reaction of one prominent Republican to Mr. Hoover's confession of error in respect to the Federal Farm Board was that if the former President recanted on several more of his policies he might make an acceptable candidate this year.

And a further word on "Scowling Jim" Farley—he predicted to the Democratic national committee that the coming campaign would be "the bitterest and certainly the dirtiest political struggle that any of us here can remember." Within a week he did his part to make this prophecy come true.

The latest addition to the New Deal "brain trust" is William O. Douglas, just named a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The new member has been professor of law at Yale University for several years. Since 1934 he has divided his time between his professorial duties at New Haven and the direction of the SEC's investigation of the activities of protective committees and corporate reorganizations.

Mr. Douglas is a specialist in corporation law and has been concentrating since the depression on the crop of bankruptcies and reorganizations which have resulted from it. He worked for the Old Dealers, too, having supervised a series of bankruptcy studies which the Commerce Department conducted under the Hoover regime.

His appointment gives Old Eli a talking point against Harvard boastings over 36-year-old James McCauley Landis, SEC chairman. Incidentally, Mr. Douglas is only 37 years old.

Senator Pat Harrison denies reports circulated in Mississippi that instead of running for reelection he would succeed Comptroller General John Raymond McCarl. Mr. Harrison wants it thoroughly understood that he wishes nothing more than to retain his Senate seat.

Mr. McCarl's 15-year term expires June 30. Even though he is a Republican and has been none too friendly to New Deal measures, some Democrats favor amending the general accounting act to permit him to succeed himself. But it is doubtful whether this will be done. It appears a good bet that some Democratic lame duck will get the post when the November shooting season closes. Maybe Pat Harrison will be the next comptroller general if the voters of Mississippi are unkind to him. He faces a hot battle.

"The Constitution of the United States is like the Bible in some respects," asserts Charles A. Beard, historian and authority on that document. "Everybody has heard of it and feels competent to discourse on the subject. Yet it is safe to say that 99 per cent of those who speak of the Constitution in tones of awe or disrespect could not pass a high school examination on its phrases, principles and applications. Fewer still could write a correct 50-word account of how it was framed and adopted."

Columbia Broadcasting Co. has increased its time allotment for Alfred E. Smith's speech before the American Liberty League dinner next week from 45 minutes to one hour. Editor Paley apparently believes that story will deserve a little more space. But neither major broadcasting system will carry the speeches of lesser lights at the dinner.

Having eaten their way to solvency on Jackson Day, the Democrats paid off the old mortgage on the homestead held by John J. Raskob, its former chairman and now a Liberty Leaguer. To prove it the national committee yesterday made public photostatic copies of the canceled note and the check it gave him for $25,000, the last installment on a debt of $120,250.

Naval Reserve Increase Plan Before House

Committee Gets Project Proposing Strength Surpassing Regular Force.

By the Associated Press.

A Naval Reserve strength surpassing the regular Navy personnel was projected yesterday before a House committee as it opened hearings on a measure to revise the Naval Reserve act of 1925.

Committee members coincidentally studied reports of Japan's withdrawal from the London naval arms conference. Most of them, however, declined to comment on this action.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat, Georgia, of the Naval Affairs Committee, would say only that there had been no developments to date affecting the jurisdiction of his committee in connection with Japan's withdrawal in London.

Representative Darrow (Republican), Pennsylvania, ranking Republican member of the committee, said he was not surprised at the Japanese action. He added he was hopeful a general naval armaments race might be avoided.

Reports have reached several committeemen that approval will be sought for modernization of two battleships or the construction of a new one as replacement in addition to the regular program for a treaty-strength Navy by 1942, but no formal proposals have been submitted.

The bill to expand the Naval Reserve was placed before a sub-committee headed by Representative Delaney (Democrat), New York. As hearings opened Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, reported that the Naval Reserve plays an important part in war plans, particularly for the first 120 days of a war.

Delaney told the committee the proposal to increase Naval Reserve strength has the indorsement of President Roosevelt. Andrews added he had discussed the matter with the President and found him interested in plans to bring the reserve up to a point considered necessary for a treaty navy.

At the same time, however, Andrews called a suggestion for an Assistant Secretary of the Navy in charge of the Naval Reserve "an extremely poor recommendation." He emphasized the Naval Reserve is "an integral part" of the regular Navy and is so administered.

A maximum peace strength of 16,000 officers and 152,000 men in the Naval Reserve and 2,650 officers and 35,200 men in the Marine Reserve was recommended to the subcommittee in the report of a special Navy board. Naval Reserve strength January 1, 1935, was about 8,900 officers and 33,255 men.

Comparative Naval Reserve strength of the United States with other leading powers then was listed, showing this country lagging behind Great Britain, France and Italy.

The United States was reported to have about 11,000 officers and 35,000 men; Great Britain, 11,000 officers and 60,000 men; France, 5,000 officers and 170,000 men, and Italy 7,000 officers and 210,000 men.

Stavisky Charges Are Sent to Jury

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 16.—France's famous Stavisky case went to the jury today after one of the longest trials in the annals of the nation.

The jury deliberated 1,955 questions concerning charges that the 17 defendants including Arlette Simon Stavisky, widow of Sacha (Serge Alexandre) Stavisky, aided the swindler in the vast frauds which caused bloody riots in the streets of Paris and upset a French cabinet.

The prosecution dropped the charges against three of the defendants, Camille Aymard, and Paul Levy, editors charged with lending their influence to Stavisky for profit, and Henri Dupardon, a banker charged with lending his name to Stavisky swindlers.

All 20 defendants echoed the same defense plea, that they were innocent victims of Stavisky, whom they respected as a financial genius and whom they later found to be a $10,000,000 swindler.

Liquor Called 'Public Enemy' By Sheppard

Alcohol Undermines U. S. Imperils Liberty, Says Senator.

By the Associated Press.

Beverage alcohol yesterday was described as "public enemy No. 1" by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, author of the prohibition amendment, in an address to the Senate on the sixteenth anniversary of the amendment's enactment.

Conforming to annual custom, Sheppard took the floor to say:

"Beverage alcohol undermines the moral, mental and physical strength of multiplying millions and thus cripples the foundations of democracy, self-government and progress. It imperils liberty because liberty is the power to choose the right and to take advantage of opportunity.

"An article whose consumption impairs this power through the corruptions of the springs of thought and energy, of health and will, as does this liquid poison, is a destroyer of liberty and its tolerances, not an emblem of freedom."

Gray and thin-faced, Sheppard went on to say that "occurrences since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment have shown that the dangers of the liquor traffic to the Nation have multiplied with the disappearance of national prohibition."

In this connection, he predicted that the number of motor accidents in 1935, due to liquor, would be found to have equalled the number in 1934, despite widespread safety campaigns.

He referred to insurance company statistics and police records in various localities to substantiate this view.

Beverage alcohol and automobile driving do not mix," he continued. Asserting there are now about 200,000 retail liquor outlets as contrasted with 177,790 saloons when prohibition was made law, he said that "it must be conceded that no less than 50 per cent of distilled spirits was not being tax paid" during 1935. He placed the illicit production of liquor at around 271,623,000 gallons during the year.

Another point was that "women have become patrons in such number and with such persistence that the words "feminine bar fly" have become a shameful addition to our language."

Ickes Admits Hoover Attack Was in Error

'Mistaken Impression,' He Confesses; Denies Reply Is an 'Apology.'

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes admitted yesterday that he was under a "mistaken impression" when he declared recently that three laws signed by Herbert Hoover were declared unconstitutional.

In an open letter to the former President which termed "extreme" Hoover's demand for a correction, Ickes hit back also with a statement that "it is entirely constitutional to do nothing."

In a speech at Rochester, N. Y., before AAA was invalidated, Ickes had said the Supreme Court had ruled out five New Deal laws, and called this "a fine showing when one considers the desperate plight of the country on March 4, 1933, and the necessity of adopting emergency remedies to save the life of the patient."

The Cabinet member had added that three laws signed by Hoover were invalidated, seven under the Harding Administration, and seven under the Coolidge regime.

In his letter yesterday, which he told reporters he wouldn't characterize as an "apology," Ickes said his statements were based on "figures that had already received wide currency and which had been uncontradicted."

He has since learned, he continued, that three adverse decisions rendered during Hoover's administration were against statutes enacted previously, and added:

"I am sormry indeed, no less on your account than on my own, that this information was not reliable, as I had every right to expect it to be."

The Ickes letter continued, with reference to Hoover's telegram asking a correction:

"If I may say so, the 'allegations and untruthful statement' and 'falsity' are extreme. They do not admit that there might be an honest mistake.

"Of course, I am fully aware that a politician who is trying to improve a desperate situation will overlook no opportunity to exaggerate an incident with a view to arousing popular sympathy, but I did not expect this of a man who has occupied the very great position with which you once were honored."

The letter also declared:

"I am all the more willing to accept your statement that no law passed during your Administration has been declared unconstitutional, in view of the fact that that Administration was notable as a do-nothing Administration.

"I should have recalled that attempts to meet any of the critical economic problems were negligible during your Administration. It is entirely constitutional to do nothing."

Soil Act May Replace AAA

bodying soil conservation and crop control, with benefit payments to be made indirectly through means as yet undecided exactly.

That while the Administration is fairly well set on one program, a permanent one, Congressional leaders may divide this into two sections: A temporary plan to handle the emergency situation created by the onset of planting time, and a permanent plan, capable of withstanding all tests and unhurriedly legislated.

That the White House conference held yesterday on the original premise that cotton and the Bankhead cotton control act would be discussed was actually a strategic move to secure the support of Smith, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Robinson View.

As the White House ended after an hour's sesion, Senator Joseph T. Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, and majority leader in the Senate, said, as spokesman for the group:

"The conference was in relation to the agricultural adjustment act and methods by which the results of the decision of the Supreme Court may be counteracted insofar as is practicable and constitutional to do so.

"The trend of the conference was to relate such legislation as may be enacted for soil erosion and soil conservation, and to make provisions for the obligations incurred under the AAA.

"It is expected that amendments to existing statutes will be adequate for the purposes stated and that they will be ready for consideration within a very short time."

Seecrtary Wallace, who refused to answer all leading questions, when asked if by "existing statutes" Senator Robinson meant the soil conservation act of 1935, and if its expansion were sought, smiled broadly and said:

"That might be useful."

Agreemnt Reported.

All indications were that the conference had agreed at least to a drive for immediate temporary farm legislation, with the probabilities that if successful it would be continued. Federal payments of benefits to farmers would be a primary stipulation in all plans considered.

The plan as a whole would be worked out along lines that would adjust crop production through retirement of acreage as a soil conservation and erosion-prevention act and farmers would receive Federal "rental" payments for acreage thus removed from production.

The plan would be to widen the soil conservation act of 1935 to authorize wholly and legally all such moves, instead of seeking new legislation in a drawn-out fight.

Besides the $300,000,000 sought in order to pay the Government's "moral obligation" to farmers under the invalidated AAA contracts, and the additional $60,000,000 asked to finance seed-and-feed loans for 1936, it was believed in Administration circles that about $350,000,000 would be asked to finance the outlined program for 1936.

Byrns' Statement.

Speaker Byrns told newsmen after leaving the White House:

"The necessity for enactment of farm legislation is so immediate that it has got to be done at the earliest possible moment and there won't be time for permanent legislation now."

This statement agreed with remarks of Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, and the attitude of Senator Smith.

Senator Smith was explicit in stating that while the principles of crop control are desired, within the confines of the Constitution, legislation to handle the immediate problem was most necessary. He pointed out the emergency of the planting times, and predicted amendments to the soil conservation act, indicating that such amendments would be worked out in committee.

The Senator told newsmen that he will demand that the Government take over some 4,500,000 bales of cotton, against which farmers have borrowed under the old 12-cent loan policy, and about 1,500,000 bales acquired under the old Farm Board cotton pool. This enormous surplus would be pooled in one lot. Then the Government would indicate how the surplus would be disposed of, with Senator Smith's plan that the Government in effect, would take over the farmers' equity in cotton and announce how much they would sell and at what price.

He would also ask an extension of the present bounty on cotton, or a loan.

Observers speculating on amendments to the soil conservation act noted that one of its most vital provisions was that the Soil Conservation Service created under its provisions was to be composed of Civil Service employes only. It was believed that the act could be amended to break down this section, and thus allow the Administration to move over the ousted AAA employes, many of whom are non-Civil Service, into the newly enlarged agency.

Financing Discussed.

The financing of the agency could be easily affected, it was noted, by drawing on the remnants of the Bankhead cotton fund, where it is believed there is a remainder of about $60,000,000; through the George amendment to the AAA which authorized payment of benefits out of the relief funds, though this is improbable, and from the soil conservatoin act.

It was authoritatively said that the group at the White House conference, which included in addition to Senator Robinson and Secretary Wallace, Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator; Representative Marvin Jones, Senator Smith, Secretary Morgenthau, Attorney General Cummings Solicitor General Stanley Reed, did not discuss new taxation. But in the offing loomed the passage of an excise tax act to add to the Treasury's general revenue fund, to supplant the invalid processing taxes and to aid the Treasury in raising the $1,000,000,000 more required after the Supreme Court decision. The figure of $1,000,000,000 was mentioned by Secretary Morgenthau on Capitol Hill yesterday.

At the opening of the National Agricultural Conference, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, urged the enactment of legislatoin to recover processing taxes levied and unpaid up to January 6, including those impounded in Federal courts. At the conference were leaders from the National Grange, which previously had submitted to Congress its own 10-point program, running counter to the Administration plans, the Farmers National Grain Corporation, the American Association of Agricultural Editors and the National Co-operative Council.

Other developments on the farflung farm front included an address by M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, at Des Moines, Iowa, before the annual convention of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, in which he outlined the tremendous range of the soil-conservation problem, its effects on the Nation as a whole, and the results of complete ruin of more than 50,000,000 acres of farm land by soil erosion.

Reynolds Back; Opposed to U.S. Sanctions Aid

Here After World Trip, He Declares Nations 'Cheat' on Penalties.

Smiling broadly through a tan obtained on Mediterranean waters, Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, returned to the Capital yesterday, ending a world tour that followed the Congressional junket to the Philippines.

After a stopover in Italy and brief visits in a half-dozen other countries, he talked with assurance on the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Besides predicting Italy would have a very hard time conquering Ethiopia, he observed:

"Besides, that isn't a war between Italy and Ethiopia; it's a war between Italy and Great Britain. It's a fight between two imperialistic countries."

There are three kegs of dynamite which the United States would do well to avoid, he said. One is in Europe, one in Africa and the other in Asia.

He said he would oppose every move to induce this country to cooperate with the League of Nations in enforcing a sanction against oil exports to Italy.

"Everyone is going to cheat," he said, "and one country has already triple-crossed another in the sanctions."

He explained how the erroneous report got abroad while he was away that he was missing. A British newspaper correspondent, he said, asked him about his silver views when he was with Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana. He explained that he had no pronounced opinions on the subject.

The copy when delivered in London carried the notation "missing" after Reynolds' name, meaning that his quotation was absent. The press misinterpreted the cable and published the story that the Senator was missing.

62% in Poll Oppose Policy Of New Deal

Utah and 11 Southern States Show Support for Administration.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 16.—Final tabulation in the Literary Digest poll today showed 62 per cent of nearly 2,000,000 voters were opposed now to "the acts and policies of the Roosevelt New Deal to date."

The Literary Digest reported a complete vote of 1,907,681, of which 1,195,313 votes, or 62.66 per cent, were against Roosevelt policies, and 712,368, or 37.34 per cent, were in favor of them.

Utah and 11 Southern and border States gave a final verdict in favor of the New Deal, while the other 36 States registered majorities against it. The magazine forecast, from the trend of its poll, a possibly close vote in only five States with all others registering more than a 55 per cent opinion one way or another.

Twenty-two States, the Literary Digest found, representing more than half the population of the United Sattes and casting 280 of the 531 electoral votes, gave a final majority of more than 60 per cent of the poll against the New Deal.

The Literary Digest's editors said the current poll represented a 54 per cent increase in ballots over the number cast in 1934 from virtually the same list of names.

Convict Tested For Lie on Tale Of Kidnap Cash

Man in Chicago Jail Insists He Knew Pair Who Had Lindbergh Money.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Stephen V. Spitz, Chicago Bridewell prisoner who told State officials he knew two man who claimed to possess $22,000 in Lindbergh ransom money, faced a lie detector test tonight.

Indicating some skepticism, Gov. Henry Horner suggested that Spitz repeat his story while submitting to the polygraph test. If interrogators are impressed with the results, the executive said, the information should be forwarded to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey.

Spitz, scheduled to be released tomorrow after serving a sentence for obtaining money under false pretenses, made one change in his original version of his contacts with the alleged ransom handlers.

It was in August, 1934, he told investigators, that he met "Adolph Blaustein" and "Fred Menk" in New York. They told him they had $22,000 of the Lindbergh currency, he said, and offered to sell him $5,000 of it for 40 cents on the dollar. Spitz claimed he advanced $1,800, went to Chicago to raise more money and met the pair in a Newark hotel three weeks later, only to have them demand 55 cents for each dollar of the funds.

Spitz asserted the negotiations ended there, but John Landesco, member of the Illinois Board of Pardons and Paroles, reported the prisoner later admitted he had obtained some of the ransom cash and had disposed of it "here and there."

"I don't put much faith in the story," stated Gov. Horner upon his arrival from Springfield, "but I want to give him a fair hearing."

Bernard Finnigan, attorney for Spitz, said he would request Gov. Horner to release the prisoner so he could give a first-hand account to Gov. Hoffman at Trenton, N. J. Finnigan flew to Trenton last Sunday to place details of the affair before Hoffman. Gov. Horner stated, however, he had received no request from the lawyer.

It was indicated Spitz would remain in his cell until he serves out a $1,000 fine or obtains a hearing on a pauper's writ.

Prayer Answered, Mother Declares

Kamez, Germany, Jan. 16 (AP).—Frau Pauline Hauptmann was excitedly jubilant tonight when informed her son, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, had been granted a reprieve by Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey.

Aroused from sleep, the mother of the man who was sentenced to execution for the kidnap murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., said:

"I went to bed with prayers on my lips. Now I believe all will be well. Oh, my dear son, my dear daughter-in-law, my grandchild. God has heard my prayer and made his light to shine upon us.

"Now I am sure my son's innocence will be proved and my unhappy boy will be happy once more."

She drafted a telegram to Bruno. It said:

"Dear Richard: I am more than happy that our prayers have been answered and all be well. (Signed) Thy Mother."

April 11 Is Deadline Now for Hauptmann

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16 (AP).—Bruno Hauptmann will die—unless circumstances warrant a new reprieve—sometime between March 18 and April 11.

Under the law, he must be resentenced because his second death sentence—set for "the week of January 13"—will expire at midnight Saturday.

The 30-day reprieve will expire February 15. Attorney General David T. Wilentz said he would then ask Justice Thomas W. Trenchard to sign a new death warrant.

The law provides the new date must be not less than four nor more than eight weeks after the date on which the warrant is signed.

The earliest Hauptmann could go to the chair would be the week beginning Monday, March 15. The latest would be the week of April 6.

Mrs. Hauptmann Visits Prison; Lawyers Leave Court After Plea Here

Bruno Smiles, Wife and Child Pose for Films

'Was Sure of Justice,' Says Pale-Faced Prisoner on News of Reprieve.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was sure all along that "something would turn up," he said tonight when informed that Gov. Harold G. Hoffman had granted him two months more of life.

In a hotel far away from the lonely State prison death house the wife of the man who would have died in the electric chair tomorrow night except for the Governor's action said: "I never was so happy in all my life."

It was the climax to a day of varying emotions for the Hauptmanns. A few hours earlier Mrs. Hauptmann had been guided through a curious crowd in front of the prison to pay what she feared was her last visit to her husband. They talked unemotionally for half an hour.

Hauptmann's next visitor was the Rev. John Matthieson, Lutheran minister, who "prayed and talked and then prayed again" with the condemned man.

In the midst of this gloomy "discussion of spiritual things," Hauptmann's lawyers, Lloyd Fisher and Frederick Pope, arrived from Gov. Hoffman's office. As they walked down the corridor to the death house bearing news of the reprieve, they met the Rev. Matthieson coming out.

Hauptmann pressed close to the bars of the cell and his pale face "lighted with pleasure" when told that he would not have to die tomorrow night after all, Fisher said.

"Richard, this time we've come with good news," the attorneys told him.

"I was sure that something would turn up," smiled Hauptmann. "I had the utmost confidence in the course of justice and I knew something would happen to prevent the execution."

After leaving the prison, Attorney Fisher telephoned the news to Mrs. Hauptmann and said she began sobbing, unable to say more than "thank you very much."

Later, composed and smiling, Mrs. Hauptmann met newsreel cameramen on the mezzanine floor of her hotel and posed with her son, Mannfried, sitting in her lap. Into the microphone, she said: "I never was so happy in my life. I want to thank the Governor and all the attorneys for what they have done. I hope soon Richard will be a free man and come home to baby and me."

A Few Words Stay Hauptmann's Death

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16 (U.P.).—The document which Gov. Harold G. Hoffman announced today he would sign to delay the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann reads as follows:

"To Bruno Richard Hauptmann:

"Pursuant to the power and authority vested in me by the constitution of this State, I hereby grant you a reprieve from the sentence of death imposed upon you and to be carried out during the week beginning the 12th day of January, 1936, to the 15th day of February, A. D. 1936.

"In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and privy seal this 16th day of January, A. D. 1936.

"HAROLD G. HOFFMAN,
"Governor of New Jersey.

"Attested by secretary to Governor,

"R. WILLIAM LEGAY."

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann said tonight her husband told her he could reveal nothing more about the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder even if offered "complete freedom."

"Richard has told everything he knows," she said. "In fact, he told me that if the Governor or attorney general came out to him and said 'Richard, if you will tell us the truth about the Lindbergh kidnaping, we will grant you complete freedom,' he would not be able to tell them any more than he has already.

"Richard has made himself available to any questions whatsoever. He said that if he told another story, he would get—what do you call it—all balled up—because it would be a lie. He has already told the whole truth."

Mrs. Hauptmann said she was convinced of his innocence because they were together on the night of the kidnaping.

Police Hunt for Karpis, Reported in Newark

Newark, N. J., Jan. 16 (AP).—City detectives searched the neighborhood of the Hudson Tube station for Alvin Karpis today after New York police sent out an automatic printer message that a taxicab driver had brought to Newark a man resembling the public enemy.

The taxicab driver said his fare bore three facial scars and was accompanied by a blonde. He picked them up in New York, he said.

Impeachment Faces Hoffman Over Reprieve

Political Foes Start Move in Legislature to Oust Governor.

of about 30 Assembly Republicans have been hostile to him.

One prominent Democrat pointed out it would be possible for any citizen of New Jersey to go into court and start a mandamus proceeding to try to force Principal Keeper Mark O. Kimberling to carry out the execution tomorrow night.

In that event Kimberling would have to come into court and explain that he had a reprieve from the Governor. In that way the court could pass on the legality of the Governor's action.

Hoffman admitted he was acting in the face of a ruling by Attorney General David T. Wilentz that a reprieve was illegal. In event his authority is challenged through mandamus proceedings, his defense will be that precedents have been established. The law says that the Governor lacks power to reprieve a condemned man any time past 90 days after conviction. Hauptman was conicted at Flemington on February 13, 1935.

Hoffman has before him an enormous mass of data supposed to have bearing on the case. Many of the letters and telegrams already have been investigated by State police and found to be spurious.

Many of these letters purport to have knowledge of persons other than Hauptmann, who have "confessed" the Lindbergh crime. Some of them express a desire on the part of the writer to "confess"—but always provided the State of New Jersey will pay railroad fare to Trenton.

No matter how preposterous a letter or telegram sounds, the State police investigate it.

"Had to Do It," Says Hoffman.

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey asserted here tonight his reprieve of Bruno Richard Hauptmann "was one of those things that I had to do and I did it."

He did not explain further.

"And what I will do during the next 30 days—even I don't know that," he added.

Referring to a purported threat of an attempt to impeach him, he said: "That's just a newspaperman's dream."

The Governor attended a Masonic meeting at Mecca Temple.

Trenton Tense With Excitement As Hoffman Announces Action

Wilentz Holds Reprieve Illegal; Crowds Jam Corridors of State House; Prison Inmates in Uproar as Governor's Decision Becomes Known.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16.—Announcement of a 30-day reprieve for Bruno Richard Hauptmann capped one of the most exciting days since the Flemington trial.

Voices buzzed through the Statehouse all day. Rumors flew swiftly. The feeling of tenseness increased rather than diminished as the hours passed, even though the general opinion was a reprieve, if one was coming, might not be announced until tomorrow.

The corridors were alive with men and women. In hotels, at bars throughout the city, on the street, in shops and homes and offices the talk was Hauptmann and Hoffman. What would be done? When would it be done?

The Governor had not come to the Statehouse all day, but the word got around that he was at the hotel where he usually stays. It was past midafternoon when Attorney General David T. Wilentz, cigar in mouth, brief case in hand, sauntered out of the Statehouse and walked down the block to the hotel.

To Governor's Room.

Wilentz went to the Governor's room and laid before him an opinion that a reprieve at this time would be illegal.

He added, orally, that he would not make an issue of the question. He would not oppose it. He was simply making his position, and the position of the law, clear.

Wilentz's stay was brief. He and the Governor left together. They were laughing and exchanging jests as they came down in the elevator.

The two went to the Statehouse, to the office where the court of pardons usually meets. With Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., of Hunterdon County, where Hauptmann was tried, they stood at the far side of the big circular table.

The Governor was calm. He picked up a newspaper, looked at a headline on the Hauptmann case, laid the paper down. He was smiling now, and when he spoke his voice was even. He faced the crowd of newspapermen, jammed shoulder to shoulder in the room all the way to the entrance.

"I have decided," he said, "to grant a reprieve."

Passed the Word.

Office workers in the Statehouse left their jobs and ran out into the corridors. Stenographers, clerks, officeholders, passed the word from one to another. It spread to the street.

People cried out: "I knew it! I knew he would do it."

In the mysterious way that news gets into prisons the word reached the New Jersey State Prison, where Hauptmann waited in his death-house cell.

The prisoners started to shout, giving vent to their energy, screaming and hammering at their cell doors as only men do who are pent up for months and years. The din increased, but no one could say what emotions they were expressing.

Above the uproar could be heard shouts of "Hauptmann! Hauptmann!" and "Reprieve! Reprieve!"

The noise continued without abatement for some time. Then the prison was quiet again.

Hauptmann Plea Refused

Hauptmann, the application for leave to file a petition for writ of habeas corpus—denied."

These words were delivered in a clear, grave voice, and when they were spoken the court, without further ado, turned to the regular business before it, the pleading of a Chicago attorney in another case.

There was a distinct pause between the words of the petition and its final disposition—"denied"—that heightened the tensely dramatic atmosphere in the pillered, marble room.

Neil Burkinshaw, former newspaperman and prosecutor for the Attorney General in several noted cases, first had attempted to present his petition to Mr. Justice Roberts, but after consultation with the jurist's secretary went instead to the open courtroom.

At an opportune moment Burkinshaw arose in the court and addressed the bench, asking permission to file a petition to free Hauptmann from prison, and a motion for a writ to stay execution while the court considered the writ.

Quietly, but in a grave manner, the Chief Justice in his black robes leaned forward and said:

"You may submit the paper."

The court shortly afterward recessed for luncheon and remained out 3 minutes longer than the customary half-hour between 2 and 2:30 p. m. The full bench was reported to have read and discussed the 12-page brief submitted to the court.

Upon the court's return Meyer Abrams, a Chicago attorney, started again to address the court on the subject he had been discussing before the recess. Abrams was stopped by the Chief Justice who made his pronouncement.

Everyone in the courtroom leaned forward to catch every word. There was an audible gasp as the Cheif Justice said the final word of the brief sentence, and then the people in the room relaxed as reporters sped from the room. Abrams resumed hsi speech. There was no confusion.

Burkinshaw, who with his partner, Nugent Dodds, had rushed to Washington from Trenton to present the motion to the highest tribunal, refused to comment after receiving the negative answer.

The request for a stay of execution was not mentioned by Hughes because it was automatically turned down by the court's rejection of the habeas corpus petition.

The Burkinshaw plea presented nearly the same claims that had previously been made by Hauptmann's counsel in other efforts to obtain his freedom after conviction at Flemington, N. J., by a jury for the murder of the Lindbergh child.

The petition bore Hauptman's own signature. It claimed, also, that the first ransom note was out of the possession of the New Jersey officials "almost immediately after its receipt" by them.

Further the document contended that the jurors in the case had come in contact with a mob spirit prejudicial to Hauptmann's interests.

Burkinshaw and Dodds were reported authoritatively to plan no further action in the case.

Colored Man Is Slain On Highway Bridge

An unidentified colored man was found, shot to death, early yesterday on the Highway Bridge, by Francis E. Cartland, 1332 Massachusetts avenue northwest, the bridge watchman. The man, described as being about 30 years old, weighing 170 pounds and wearing dark clothing, was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was pronounced dead from a bullet wound in his head.

A .38 caliber Army revolver with one loaded and one empty shell in it was found beside the body.

Hauptmann Granted Reprieve

him. With one hand he slowly picked up the paper and turned it over, the headline face down.

He smiled slightly to relieve the tension and then announced the reprieve.

Asked later why he granted the reprieve, the Governor, speaking for the news reels, said:

"A reprieve is an act of executive clemency rather than judicial clemency. I am not required to give a reason, but I might say there are grave doubts in this case, not only in my mind but in the minds of many of our citizens."

Mrs. Hauptmann was in her hotel room when a telephone call told her of the Governor's decision.

"That is wonderful," she cried. "I can only say thank you. Now my only wish is that the real truth of the terrible Lindbergh kidnaping comes out, that the terrible people who did this thing will either come before the Governor or that they will be caught."

Fisher and Pope came from the death house just at dusk and said Hauptmann had been "deeply and humanly touched" by the reprieve.

"He told us that he had the utmost confidence in the course of justice," Fisher said.

"He said: 'I was absolutely sure that something would happen to prevent my execution. I knew all day that something would happen, or that somebody would step forward to prove my innocence.'"

"Hauptmann was never very touched by his numerous reverses," Fisher said, "but his reaction to the good news today showed that he was deeply and humanly touched."

Fisher said Hauptmann was eager to see his wife.

The Governor's action followed swiftly circulation of apparently well-founded reports that he had in his possession a confession from a new figure in the case. This was denied, however, by the Governor and also by high prosecuting officials.

The Governor's clemency, even though it promises only a short respite, is the first break in Hauptmann's favor in his 16-month struggle against the charge that he kidnaped the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh from their Hopewell, N. J., home the night of March 1, 1932, and killed the child.

Hauptmann has lost seven court actions one after the other—two of them being in the United States Supreme Court. A third was in the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals and a fourth was in the court of pardons—a mercy rather than a judicial court. His other defeats were in New York, where he lost his fight against extradition to New Jersey, in Flemington, where he was tried and convicted, and in Trenton last Tuesday, when he was denied a writ of habeas corpus and an execution stay by Federal Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis.

Hauptmann's spiritual advisers, the Rev. John Matthiesen, was visiting in the death house at the time the Governor's decision to reprieve was announced, but did not learn of it until afterward.

"Hauptmann had a headache today," the clergyman said, "and was somewhat depressed because he didn't expect a reprieve.

"I told him he should not hold a grudge against anyone, and he replied that he had none. The reprieve will come as a pleasant surprise."

Matthiesen, in a letter to the court of pardons last week, urged clemency and expressed the conviction that Hauptmann was innocent of the murder.

There was much speculation as to what new evidence Gov. Hoffman may possess.

The "confession" reported to have been made by some one other than Hauptmann was still a deep mystery tonight. The Governor said he had no knowledge of it, nor would he state what evidence he did possess. J. Edgar Hoover, of the Department of Justice, also disclaimed knowledge of a confession, as did Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, of the State police, and Attorney General Wilentz.

The Governor has indicated dissatisfaction with the story Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon told, especially in view of the recent publication of a series of articles titled, "Jafsie Tells All."

Among other things, the reprieve will provide ample time for Dr. Condon to return from his southern cruise and answer whatever questions the Governor may wish to ask. He sailed from New York the day before the pardons court met here.

The next step in the case was not apparent tonight. It was certain the Governor's investigation has been for the most part independent of the defense activities which have been concerned with appeals, based largely on criticism of the conduct of the Flemington trial.

Hauptmann's hope of a new trial lies with the same justice whose conduct his counsel have criticized—Justice Thomas W. Trenchard. If new evidence is uncovered, either by the Governor or by defense counsel, it might be presented to him with an application for another trial.

Assistant Attorney General Joseph Lanigan held, however, that under a law passed a few years ago the time limit for offering new evidence as a basis of a new trial expired six months after Hauptmann's conviction last February 13.

It was pointed out that even though new evidence could not be used to obtain a new trial, it could be presented for commutation of sentence or for a full pardon.

Amandus Hochmuth, the 87-year-old man who put his hand on Hauptmann's shoulder during the Flemington trial and said "that is the man I saw" in the vicinity of Hopewell on the day of the kidnaping, created a stir during the afternoon when he appeared at the office of the attorney general.

It was believed he might have some last minute statement to make, but it turned out he came here only to ask for a ticket to witness Hauptmann's execution.

Every arrangement had been completed for the electrocution. The executioner, Robert Elliott, of Long Island, N. Y., had been notified to be here tomorrow afternoon. The equipment had been carefully tested. Wires, telephones and telegraph equipment had been installed across from the prison walls to speed news of the execution to the world.

Invitations had been issued to the official witnesses. Mrs. Hauptmann had said her good-by—although even then she refused to admit it was good-by and had spent most of her visiting hour with her husband in talking about their baby who was brought here during the night.

Other developments today included these:

Harold C. Keyes, one-time defense investigator, was quoted in New York as saying he knew of sufficient evidence available to acquit Hauptmann if he were granted a new trial.

Gov. Horner of Illinois directed an investigation of the story of a prisoner in a Chicago jail, who was reported to have told of having been offered $22,000 worth of Lindbergh ransom money at 40 cents on the dollar. He actually bought some, and passed it "here and there," according to the story told the Governor. The evidence, if proved, is intended to show that other persons than Hauptmann were in possession of Lindbergh ransom bills.

In Washington Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said she had received appeals to intercede in Hauptmann's behalf, but would not enter into the case.

Two Slayers Die In Sing Sing's Electric Chair

Child's Murder Who Tortured Himself and One-Legged Man Executed.

By the Associated Press.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Death in the electric chair tonight claimed two of the strangest killers ever confined in Sing Sing Prison.

One was Albert Fish, 66-year-old slayer of 10-year-old Grace Budd. The other was John Smith, a one-legged man, convicted of killing James Wilson in a fight in the Bronx.

Fish, said to have looked forward to his electrocution as the "supreme thrill" of his life, took the girl away from her New York home in 1928 and killed her soon afterward.

In his confession, he blamed a "blood lust" which he said was aroused by reading tales of oriental cannibalism.

After imprisonment, Fish tortured himself by sticking needles into his abdomen. On trial, he was accused of criminally attacking numerous children. His attorneys pleaded he was insane.

To electrocute Smith, whose right leg was amputated at the knee, prison officials had to rearrange the death chair. An electrode, generally clamped to the right leg of the victim, was moved to the left side of the chair.

Robert Elliott, who is scheduled to be the executioner of Bruno Richard Hauptmann at the New Jersey prison officiated at the deaths of Fish and Smith.

Hauptmann Back To Prison Routine

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16 (AP).—Bruno Hauptmann went back tonight to the prison routine of any death-cell occupant.

With no date set for execution since a new sentence is required, Mrs. Hauptmann, who has been permitted to see her husband weekly, will see him only once a month.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper, said that although the electric chair was tested yesterday by electricians the apparatus had not been set up. Hauptman had not been prepared for the electrocution since prisoners have their heads shaved and their trouser legs slit on the last day.

Hauptmann would have been given his choice of a last meal tomorrow.

Hochmuth in No Hurry To See Hauptmann Die

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 16 (AP).—Perhaps the least ruffled of all who heard the news of Bruno Hauptmann's reprieve was Amandus Hochmuth, 87-year-old prosecution witness at the Flemington trial, who came to town to try to see the execution.

Hochmuth, an owlish kind of a man, was one of the two State witnesses who placed Hauptmann in Hopewell the day of the kidnaping. He was waiting in the attorney general's office for a pass to Hauptmann's execution when he heard the news.

His eyes blinked behind their thick glasses.

"Well," he said, "I guess I'll have to go home again. But any time will do."

Airplane Drops Food To Trapped Fishermen

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan 16 An airplane pilot said he had sighted three fishermen missing since Friday, and dropped them a package of provisions today on their tug, trapped 4 miles off shore on tiny Tahquamenon Island.

The boat was caught in heavy slush ice. Pilot John Flannery said. He said the men, Robert Gordon, of Brimley, Mich., owner of the tug; Edgar Ladd and Orville Brown, of Emerson, capered about in obvious joy when he dropped the package.

LaGuardia Seeks Ban On Phone Racketeers

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia announced today he had learned there were many telephones in New Jersey listed under New York exchange names that aided criminals, particularly race gambling racketeers, to circumvent justice.

He asserted he had conferred with New Jersey State officers and with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, and planned to seek Federal legislation outlawing the practice.

Court Slayer Indicted.

Chicago, Jan 16 (AP).—John W. Keogh, real estate operator who fatally shot Attorney Christopher G. Kinney Tuesday in Judge John Prystalski's court, was charged with murder in an indictment returned today.

Ashcraft

the verdict the sunken cheeks of the paralytic turned pale.

"I wouldn't have cared if they'd given me the electric chair," he mumbled as the guards trundled him off to the sick ward in the District Jail.

"I'd hate to be free and back on the street again. No home. I wouldn't like that. I want to go to a hospital where they wait on me.

"What did I care? No home. No place to go. Little David gone. Perhaps if they'd have electrocuted me I'd have found little David again. Who knows?"

Ashcraft said he would sleep last night for the first time since the trial began.

Did he feel bitterness?

"No, no, I am bitter no longer," he said as he puffed a cigarette.

During the arguments to the jury yesterday afternoon there were two interruptions in the crowded courtroom.

When the murder was described, Josephine Ashcraft, the child's mother, sobbed violently. She was escorted from the court by a marshal.

Later, George Carney, designated as Heavy, clandestine suitor of Josephine Ashcraft, who defense alleged drove the prisoner to desperation, shouted a denial across the room at Ieenhower. Officials warned him to keep quiet.

Dancer Blames Slaying of Son On Lost Love

Asserts Government Agent Deserted Her, So She Drowned Child.

By the Associated Press.

Newburgh, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Mrs. Dorothy Sherwood, 27, former Salvation Army lassie and burlesque dancer, declared on the witness stand today that a blighted romance and resultant fear of poverty goaded her to drown her 2-year-old son, Jimmy, in Moodna Creek last August.

Charged with first degree murder, the wan young widow is being tried by a jury of 12 men, 10 of them fathers, before County Judge Jonathon D. Wilson.

Under direct and cross-examination, she told of a romance with a man whom she described as a Government agent, and who, she said, promised to support her and her child in California if she would go away with him. He, jilted her, she testified, and then after she had lost her job as a waitress she drowned her baby "to protect him."

She refused to name the man she accused as her betrayer until her own counsel, Stanley B. Johnson, recalled her to the stand and requested her again to do so.

Biting her lips, Mrs. Sherwood hesitated for a few minutes. Then, "His name is Jesse B. Earl," she said, and was excused from the stand. Earl is under subpena.

Earlier in the day she had described him as a "Government man who sometimes showed me his badge." She said he had told her he was a liquor investigator.

Indications of a defense based on an insanity plea were sustained toward the close of the session when Johnson called as a witness Dr. Charlotte Munn, a psychiatrist and instructor at Cornell University's medical college.

"In my opinion," Dr. Munn testified, "the defendant was insane at the time of her act, and was laboring under such a delusion that she did not know right from wrong."

Magistrates Denied Right to Open Case

Baltimore, Jan. 16 (AP).—Maryland magistrates do not have the power to reopen cases, Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor ruled today in a letter to Sheriff G. Edington Bell of Montgomery County.

Sheriff Bell had asked O'Conor if he could legally release a prisoner before expiration of the sentence if notified by the trial magistrate that the remainder of the term had been suspended. The attorney general held that a statute to that effect, a local law for Montgomery, had been repealed by a general act in 1933.

He also stated that magistrates had the power to suspend sentences only at the time of the sentencing and only with the approval of the State's attorney.

Ticket Sale Starts For Birthday Ball

Sale of tickets for the President's Birthday ball, Thursday night, January 30, will be inaugurated at 10 a. m. today when Postmaster General James A. Farley purchases the first ten tickets at his office in the Postoffice Building. The sale will be made by little Miss Betty Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Wheeler.

Further sales plans will be discussed at a meeting of the ticket committee, which Chairman C. Melvin Sharpe has called for 4 p. m. today at the office of Commissioner Allen in the District Building. Establishment of a ticket headquarters, with a trained group of ticket handlers in charge, will be among the matters considered.

L. R. Gottlieb, president of the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association, called on Commissioner Allen and Col. Edward G. Bliss, chairman of the program committee, yesterday and presented a letter from his association, stating that the association had taken a $50 ad and had sent letters to all members, suggesting that they advertise. Col. Bliss also received a letter from Dr. James J. Greeves, president of the Northeast Business Men's Association, taking an ad for the association and indorsing the solicitation of advertisements from its members.

Stuart War Trophies Loaned to Battle Park

The Edward T. Stuart collection of war relics and trophies has been loaned indefinitely to the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County Battlefields Memorial National Military Park, according to the Associated Press.

Announcement of the loan was made yesterday by the National Park Service, which said eventually it will be displayed in the park museum, now under construction. It is owned by Edward T. Stuart, of Ardomore, Pa. His grandfather was chairman of the United States Christian Commission, a humanitarian organization founded primarily to care for wounded.

Roosevelt to Announce Reserve Board Soon

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt was represented yesterday as ready to announce soon the make-up of the reorganized Federal Reserve Board. He talked over appointments with Gov. Marriner S. Eccles and Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia.

The new board will be composed of seven members and will take over on February 1.

'Flying Coffin' Is Put Together For U. S. Probe

Wreck in Which 17 Died Hauled From Swamp in Arkansas.

By the Associated Press.

Goodwin, Ark., Jan. 16.—Shattered remnants of the luxurious airliner which plunged 17 persons to death in a nearby swamp were ordered assembled today for a public inquiry by Federal investigators seeking the cause of the accident.

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, of the Department of Commerce, leading the Government phase of the investigation, directed removal of the wreckage to a knoll of dry land a quarter mile away.

Although the speed recorder of the plane, jammed at 180 miles an hour, was recovered, other instruments described as vital to the inquiry were missing. Vice President Damon of the American Airlines said the recorders used were of the spring type and would not show the ship's speed at the moment of impact.

Schroeder went into the swamp during the afternoon and surveyed the place where the twin-motored Southerner fell Tuesday night with its 14 passengers and crew of 3.

It was indicated the public hearing would be transferred tomorrow to Brinkley, near here, in view of the limited accommodations of the community of 90 inhabitants.

The $85,000 11-ton liner was smashed into thousands of pieces and scattered over the 400-yard path of its plunge through the dense tree-growth in the marsh.

The plane's electric switch—which was turned on—was examined by officials, and laid aside, only to be picked up by a souvenir hunter. It had not been recovered late today.

Of the plane's recorder, Damon said:

"The jam at 180 miles does not mean a thing. A spring or pressure instrument does not give any evidence of speed in a case like this. The indicator may have spun around two or three times when it was jarred, before jamming on a number."

There was still no explanation why the last radio call from the ship, at 7:18 o'clock Tuesday night, was simple routine, reporting temperature and favorable flying conditions.

The crash is believed to have occurred some time between then and 7:30 o'clock.

Times Better, Perkins Tells Union Meeting

Seamen Debating Olander Report Hear Wages Are Up 50 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

Behind barred doors at the Seamen's Union convention, Secretary Perkins said yesterday that American workingmen were getting 50 per cent more pay than they were at the low point of the depression.

Members of the union who were not delegates, and newspapermen, sought in vain to gain admission to the convention to hear the Labor Departmet chief tell how times were getting better.

Andrew Furuseth, president of the union, joined Victor Olander, its secretary, in deciding that the convention's rule against open sessions could not be broken for Miss Perkins' appearance.

Miss Perkins, however, distributed mimeographed copies of her remarks, in which she said:

"Approximately 5,000,000 men and women who were without jobs in March, 1933, have been returned to work in private industries.

"One of the most encouraging signs of progress is the turn taken by the durable goods industries. They are always the first to suffer in a depression and the slowest to recover. They are now at their highest point since November, 1930."

The convention continued work on Olander's report, it being read, discussed and adopted section by section. Pacific Coast delegates were understood to be continuing their protests against sections criticizing the tactics of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific.

New Governor Takes Post in Newfoundland

St. John's Newfoundland, Jan. 16 (AP).—Vice Admiral Sir Humphrey Thomas Walwyn became Governor of Newfoundlaad today, a short time after landing from England.

The 56-year-old naval officer assumed the chairmanship of the island's commission government succeeding Admiral Sir David Murray Anderson, who left to become Governor of New South Wales.

The ceremony made Sir Humphrey head of the seven-man commission that has governed Newfoundland since 1934, when the island's charter as a dominion was suspended until she should get back on her financial feet.

Stove Smoke Suffocates Sleeping Man, Aged 84

Silas Maxfield, 84-year-old Negro, was suffocated by smoke on the second floor of his home, 1229 First street northwest, yesterday, before firemen responded to an alarm there. The fire, caused by an overheated stove, was confined to one room and did slight damage.

Firemen said Maxfield apparently had fallen asleep and when awakened fell near the stove. He sustained slight burns on his arms and legs. A physician from Casualty Hospital pronounced him dead.

The speakers will be Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce; Frank D. Fitzgerald, Governor of Michigan, and Fiorella LaGuardia, Mayor of New York. Miss Marguerite M. Wells, league president, will introduce the program from Washington.

Dinners and public mass meetings, at which speakers will discuss local aspects of the personnel problem before tuning in to the national broadcast, are planned. The day's schedule of public opinion-making events includes one-day personnel schools, open house in Government buildings, interviews with public officials, legislative conferences, and circularization of petition cards, seeking the political party support of campaign objectives.

Secretary Roper's topic will be "Efficiency in Public Service." He has been prominent, during his long Government service, among those advocating qualified public personnel. Gov. Fitzgerald will discuss civil service in State government. Mayor LaGuardia's topic will be "Municipal Personnel Problems."

Labor Department Gains.

A gain of 78 members is reported by Miss Dorothea de Schweinitz (F), president of Labor Department Lodge, No. 12, American Federation of Government Employes. This gain, Miss de Schweinitz says, makes up in full for the loss caused by the withdrawal of a group on December 4, 1935, when a split over policies occurred. No. 12 now claims 294 members.

Committee chairmen for 1936 have been named as follows:

Adjustment, Eleanor Nelson, Women's Bureau; membership, George Brooks, Bureau of Labor Statistics; legislative, Sol Rabkin, Bureau of Labor Statistics; publicity, Ellen Lewis, Employment Service; education, Louise Stitt, Women's Bureau; auditing, Joseph Conlin, District of Columbia Public Employment Center, and welfare, Lily Douglas, Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Obituary Fraud Holds Suspect On U. S. Charge

Relatives of Dead Persons Mulcted of $50 to $100 on Loan Claims.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Jan. 16.—Postal Inspector J. W. Cole announced today arrest of Joseph C. Lauzon, 47, charged with using the mails to defraud through a money scheme based on obituary reports. Cole said the suspect was released from the Federal penitentiary here in November, 1935, after serving 13 years on a Washington, D. C., charge of larceny.

The obituary "racket," the inspector said, was worked through a study of the deaths reported in New York, Philadelphia and Washington newspapers.

Letters addressed to persons who had recently died would mention loans of $50 or $100 the sender had assertedly made to the addressee and ask for payment now, generally stating he was "down and out and needed the money." Some of the relatives who received the letters paid the alleged debts; others complained, and the investigation followed.

Legal Aid Unit Handled 1,425 Cases in 1935

Report Shows Work of Bureau Doubled Over Previous Year.

The Legal Aid Bureau of the District, a member of the Community Chest, handled 1,425 cases last year, a report to the bureau by its three administrative officers discloses. The bureau provides free legal advice to litigants who are unable to hire attorneys.

At the bureau's office, 1010 Denrike Building, prospective clients are interviewed by a staff of some 20 assistants. In the previous year the bureau handled 684 cases, less than half the 1935 total.

The new board of trustees of the bureau consists of Dean Hill Stanley, president; George C. Gerdner, vice president; Elizabeth C. Harris, secretary; Gregory Cipriani, treasurer; Arthur Hellen, J. Wilmer Latimer, Alvin L. Newmyer, Louis Ottenberg, Grace Hays Riley, Sieforde M. Stellwagen and Justin Miller.

Immediately following the annual meeting, Miss Beatrice A. Clephane was reappointed director for the year 1936, and the following staff attorney were appointed: Julian L. Latimer, jr., James B. Hogan, Pearl B. Klein, Stephen Ingham, Elizabeth M. Cox, Francis W. Taylor, Naomi C. Friedman, Elaine W. Cogswell, Richard W. Galliher, George Didden, jr., Willie N. Gauss and Allan Fisher.

Police Hunt Asked For Missing Girl

Police yesterday were asked to search for Aileen Logue, 15, missing from her home, 1314½ Rosedale street northwest, since Tuesday.

Mrs. Daniel Logue, mother of the missing girl, said Aileen was a student at the Lenox Vocational School, and has grieved seriously since the death of her father three months ago.

Aileen was last seen when she left for school Tuesday morning. Her school companions said she expressed an intention to spend the night with a girl friend. They said she planned to be married in June.

Crime Board

answer to public indignation over the cold-blooded murder of a payroll carrier, shot down on a downtown street in daylight as he was walking to a bank. He disclosed the means taken by the commission to obtain probationary reforms, co-ordination of records, elimination of bail-bond evils and improvement of delinquency laws.

Bail Bond Situation "Amazing."

"An amazing state of affairs" was found when the bail bond situation was investigated, said Hepbron. Through the commission, regulations were enacted which forbade the pledging of more than one piece of property on a bail bond; provided that the bondsman's equity in the property pledged be worth twice as much as the size of the bond; and made a bondsman ineligible to go bail if he had a forfeiture standing against him.

"Aroused public opinion is not enough," said Hepbron. "You must organize. A gathering as representative as this one should not leave tonight without deciding whether or not Washington is to have a criminal justice commission."

The wave of cheering which accompanied his final words had not died down when the motion was made authorizing the citizens' committee of 51 which arranged the dinner to form a District commission.

Miller emphasized that a crime commission should have the following functions and characteristics:

Trained personnel, each member of which understands his work and is sympathetic to the activities of co-operating agencies.

Proper equipment.

Proper co-operatoin betwgen those who are in charge of different phases of the work.

Co-ordinatoin of effort and supervising guidance and direction.

Facilities for research.

Must Understand Problem.

A crime commission, most important of all, must have "an intelligent understanding in the community of the nature of the problem and of the vital importance of personnel, co-operation, co-ordination, equipment and research," said Miller.

It is vital that the personnel of any criminal justice organization be amply qualified for its duties, he declared, pointing out that the success of the tFederal Bureau of Investigation is due largely to the insistence upon merit and ability, with no consideration given such ulterior factors as political partisanship.

Reviewing the events which led up to last night's discussion, Meyer brought out that the Capital's current concern with the crime situation is traceable to the brutal murder of a newspaper route agent, Allen B. Wilson, in October, 1934.

Although establishment of a crime commission was urged in the report of the House sub-committee appointed to investigate the District situation, subsequent to the Wilson slaying, efforts toward this end have been sporadic and unoragnized to date, he stated.

Until last night's meeting, attended by members of civic, professional, social, official and other bodies, the commission plan had never been authrotatively presented before a large and representative audience.

The chairman read a letter from President Roosevelt congratulating the group for its initiative in giving the idea a thorough discussion.

Reservations at Maximum.

Judges, teachers, playground leaders, members of Congress, bankers, clergymen—in short, representatives of almost every conceivable profession or occupation made up last night's forum. A capacity attendance was assured days ago and scores of reservations had to be returned to senders because maximum capacity had been reached.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, pronounced the invocation. Honor guests seated at the speakers' table included Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, the chairmen of the Senate and House District committees, Senator William H. King and Representative Mary T. Norton; Rabbi Abram Simon, Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown, Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, Sanford Bates and others.

Wheeler Returns, Urges Curb on Supreme Court

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler returned to the United States from the Orient today with the assertion that the power of the Supreme Court should be limited.

Commenting on its decision invalidating the AAA, the Montana Democrat declared: "I am not at all sure but what we will have to amend the Constitution shortly."

Senator Wheeler, with Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, was an official observer at the inauguration in Manila of Manuel Quezon as first President of the Philippines.

President's Letter Lauding Purpose of Crime Dinner

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

January 16, 1936.

My dear Mr. Meyer:

For years I have endeavored to emphasize to State and local groups, and more recently to national organizations, the fact that crime is a symptom of social disorder. Its control can only be brought about through expert service in marshalling the assets of home, school, church, community and other social entities to work in common purpose with our law enforcement agencies.

The purpose that you have expressed in calling tonight's meeting is calculated to bring about a coordination of these important and influential factors in the life of the District of Columbia. In this vital work I wish you all success.

Very sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Chinese Generals Warned by Japan

Tientsin, China, Jan. 16 (AP).—North China's dominant war lords were told by Japanese militarists today that they must stop teaching their soldiers anti-Japanese doctrines, or suffer the consequences.

The warning was delivered at a conference at which Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, of the Japanese army; Maj. Gen. Hayao Tada, commander of the Japanese garrison in north China, and Gen. Sung Cheh Yuan, commander of the Peiping-Tientsin Chinese garrison, and others discussed outstanding northern issues.

An almost complete absence of results, combined with Japan's withdrawal from the naval conference, plunged Chinese officialdom into an atmosphere of deepest gloom.

Many Chinese appeared convinced that renewed Japanese military pressure in north China is imminent.

Nineteen persons took the examination for executive secretary today, three for social work consultant and one for statistician. An examination for superintendent of prisons will be held at 11 a. m. Friday.

Roosevelt Appoints Yale Man to SEC

By the Associated Press.

Prof. William O. Douglas, of Yale University, was appointed to the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday by President Roosevelt.

Only 38 years old, he will bring the commission's roster to its full five, filling the vacancy left by the resignation several months ago of Joseph P. Kennedy, former chairman. Douglas is a Democrat.

Associates said Douglas "rode the rods" to New York to matriculate in Columbia Law School. He now teaches corporation law at Yale. Chairman James M. Landis told newspapermen today his work on that subject was outstanding.

Stay on Tests Of Utility Act Assailed Here

Two Holding Companies Appeal From Justice Bailey's Decision.

Two major holding companies yesterday appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals from the District Supreme Court ruling staying their tests of the constitutionality of the holding company act.

The North American Co. and the American Waterworks & Electric Co. assailed the stay granted by Justice Jennings Bailey after a personal court appearance of Attorney General Cummings, who sought to avoid a "multiplicity" of suits.

The Government has brought suit against the Electric Bond & Share System in New York and wants to make that action the test of the holding company law. However, the North American and American Waterworks companies, in their petition yesterday, charged the stay granted the Government "constitutes a grave abuse of discretion."

Denying that the issues in their case and that against the Electric Bond & Share Co. are identical, the companies maintained that:

"No litigant is entitled to a stay order which permits him, as one party in a series of lawsuits with many other litigants, to select the adversary, the issues, the state of facts and the court which he prefers for the litigation, in order that he may, as defendants argued in the lower court, prosecute that one case through the trial and appellate courts to a final decision which will serve as a 'valuable precedent' on some of the issues which will ultimately have to be tried in the cases that are stayed. And that is especially true where, as here, the plaintiffs in the cases that are stayed are daily suffering great and irreparable and increasing damages which will continue all through the long period of the stay, and through the additional long period that must subsequently elapse before their own cases can be tried and finally decided on appeal."

Mr. Hoover On Agriculture.

Herbert Hoover's Nebraska address was a forceful indictment of the New Deal agricultural policy of planned scarcity, but it was much less convincing when the former President undertook to defend his own record. The attempt to saddle the present Administration with responsibility for the banking debacle of 1933, and the collapse of the incipient recovery movement of 1932, will not hold water. Fear of New Deal policies was not the cause of a banking weakness of long standing. President Roosevelt's campaign promises and platform pledges conveyed no hint of the experiments which he subsequently announced to a startled public.

Moreover, Mr. Hoover is significantly silent about the miscarriage of the abortive stabilization efforts of the Farm Board. That ill-fated experiment in agricultural relief should have made him more charitable in judging his successor in office. He also weakens a strong case by an imaginative attack upon the reciprocal tariff policies of the Administration which, he says, are opening up the American market to farmers of Cuba, Canada, Spain and Italy, with the last two of which no agreement has been concluded. To demand that the American farmer shall have no competition whatsoever in the home market is to disregard the necessity of opening up import markets in order to make agricultural exports possible.

The former President's substitute program of agricultural relief has much that is highly commendable. It rightly emphasizes the need for an improvement in our marketing machinery through uncoerced farmer co-operation, with the aid of the existing farm credit machinery which Mr. Hoover generously admits has been improved under the New Deal. He is also prepared to urge outright subsidies for certain crops in order to bring about a better balanced agriculture and to increase soil fertility.

On the whole, the address does credit to Mr. Hoover's sincerity in offering a constructive program of alternative action. His occasional intemperance as a critic is unfortunate, but it does not destroy the value of his positive contributions to a solution of the farm problem.

Mobilizing Civic Opinion.

Washington's interest in the preservation of public order was amply demonstrated last night when civic, professional, business and political leaders assembled to consider ways and means of curbing crime. Aside from the policies discussed, the interest behind the gathering of such a group is a hopeful augury for the improvement of our local system of law enforcement.

In ordinary circumstances the arrest and prosecution of criminals is a routine procedure in which the public finds too little interest. Even ghastly murders which remain unsolved, inexcusable delays in bringing indicted persons before the bar of justice, and serious laxity in the police department may not arouse public protest if there is no means of systematically focusing attention upon those conditions. For the average individual feels little or no responsibility for the public safety. It is only when the community as a whole makes its influence felt that the most effective resistance to the forces of lawlessness can be mobilized.

During recent years the advance of gangsterism in Washington has been unmistakable, and lesser criminal activity has raised a host of problems. Our law enforcement machinery has been overtaxed. The relative ease with which criminals escape punishment has accentuated the problem. Apprehension was especially aroused last year by a number of brazen crimes which led to a Congressional investigation. The facts developed by that inquiry brought a sharp awakening on the part of many civic groups and a sense of responsibility for strengthening our law enforcement agencies, which led to last night's meeting.

Organization of a crime commission should result from this community effort. If that proposed agency follows the lines clearly indicated by the experience of other cities, so lucidly outlined at the dinner, it will serve as a spearhead for civic groups in their efforts to strengthen law enforcement machinery. Certainly a united front in so important a cause must merit universal commendation.

"America Must Act."

In a study rendered particularly timely by the AAA decision, Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, emphasizes the national importance of recapturing our foreign markets and provides a useful survey of the trade agreements policy which the Administration has devised with that end in view.

In asserting that "America Must Act"—the title of his book—Mr. Sayre means that the United States must, for the sake of its own prosperity, combat the world-wide trend toward economic nationalism which has raised barriers to imports and in so doing cut off export markets. Months ago Secretary Wallace argued persuasively that "America Must Choose" between a revival of agricultural exports and the subsidized crop reduction program of the AAA. With the latter now declared unconstitutional, the stronger title employed by Mr. Sayre is doubly justified.

The Assistant Secretary of State effectually disposes of the threadbare argument that foreign trade is unimportant to this country because on the average it comprises not more than 10 per cent of our total production. It is assuredly not unimportant to our cotton growers in view of the fact that nearly two-thirds of the cotton produced was exported in 1934, a higher proportion than in 1929, although the value of the exports was less than half that of the earlier year.

Growers of wheat likewise are not unconcerned at the shrinkage of exports to a mere $27,000,000 in 1934, contrasted with total exports of $192,000,000 in 1929. Many other farm products are also heavily dependent upon foreign markets, as are important manufacturing industries. "When foreign trade thrives," as Mr. Sayre says, "not only do mills turn, but millions of Americans find employment servicing this trade; ships employ seamen, ports become busy and prosperous, rail transport and trucking activity speed up, bank services expand, and all those who supply these services enjoy better business."

The unwillingness of some Americans to make the concessions necessary to assure an expansion of our foreign trade is partly due to an unwillingness to look beyond fancied self-interest to consideration of national welfare. It is also the result of ignorance of the fundamental nature of foreign trade. The fact that a creditor nation, like the United States, must accept goods in order to obtain payment for exports and to collect interest from debtors is a truism. But it cannot be repeated too frequently or too emphatically by far-seeing officials who are seeking to find outlets for our surplus products.

The strictly economic obstacles to revival of foreign trade have been rendered much more formidable by the suicidal efforts of many nations to attain self-sufficiency. Undoubtedly the protective devices necessitated by pursuit of such policies do irreparable injury at home and abroad. But the quotas, import restrictions, and rigid clearing arrangements which have accompanied this movement are themselves more of a consequence than a cause of nationalist sentiment.

It is significant to note that Dr. Schacht, the German minister of economy and head of the Reichsbank, now states emphatically that Germany as a part of the world economy must reject an idea of self-sufficiency which can only mean poverty for her people. A prosperous domestic industry, he asserts, has to be supplanted by a flourishing foreign trade. Coming from an adherent of the hyper-nationalistic Hitler regime, such opinions strengthen the belief that the efforts of the State Department to break down trade barriers are not as futile as skeptics at first affirm.

Without indulging in any unwarranted enthusiasm, Mr. Sayre's study effectively supports his thesis that "the American trade agreements program stands out today as the most constructive single effort to achieve the liberalization of world trade."

Localizing Relief.

After two years as administrator of local relief, Commissioner Allen has resigned in the belief that by so doing he opens the way for the District to meet its relief obligations in the most efficient manner possible. Persuaded that Washington will be compelled to provide for destitution for an indefinite time to come, he feels—and rightly—that the administration of public assistance should be taken over by the Board of Public Welfare.

Earlier in the week, New York City's emergency relief bureau ordered a similar move. With the WPA now undertaking to provide work for most employables, local agencies are offered a breathing spell in which to reorganize on a permanent and business-like basis. But, as Frederick McReynolds, chairman of the Washington Board of Public Welfare, emphasizes, many people now unemployed in the District are unlikely to be able to find jobs in Washington, now or in the future. The time must come when the local bureau will be required to reassume its responsibility for the support and rehabilitation of these jobless employables. The current reorganization, designed to reduce administrative costs to a minimum and to encourage co-operation with Federal employment agencies, is a case of long-range planning.

That Elwood Street, director of public welfare, is more than competent to rearrange the local office on an economical and at the same time practicable basis goes without saying. If he should, however, have any hesitation as to how far to reduce public assistance at the moment, he has only to refer to the advice contained in Commissioner Allen's note of resignation. Here it is urged that the "reduction should not be carried out indiscriminately by curtailment of funds but rather by a careful check of the actual needs of individual cases." The whole community would indorse this as a sound working principle.

No Cause For Excitement.

Japan's departure from the London Naval Conference must not be interpreted as a signal for commencement of a naval race. The positions occupied by the foremost naval powers have not been changed. Irreconcilable differences of long standing have merely been brought out into the open and recognized as such. Even that negative achievement may provide a clearing of the atmosphere.

From the departing speech of Admiral Nagano, head of the Tokyo delegation at London, it appears that the Japanese are chiefly concerned over their national prestige. Frequent reference has been made to their belief that adequate national defense for Japan can be secured only through establishment of a "common upper limit." But this point is always secondary to the indignities which, in their opinion, the ratio system has imposed upon the Japanese. Their attitude is tersely expressed in a single sentence from Admiral Nagano's address:

> Allocation of an inferior ratio is so detrimental for national prestige that it is bound to produce serious repercussions in our country, being the source of permanent and profound discontent to our people.

There must be a great deal of sympathy with this attitude, which we would very likely take ourselves were the positions reversed. Any nation has a right to reject international agreements that would impinge upon its self-respect. Since there is nothing to be gained by arbitrarily imposing a feeling of inferiority on any people, Congress might well seize this strategic moment to revise the distasteful and superfluous statute which discriminates against Japanese immigrants. Certainly it would be sound policy to remove this totally unnecessary grievance, if for no other reason than to demonstrate the sincerity of the American position.

The real test will come in the way Japan utilizes her new freedom from restraint. Admiral Nagano has given assurance that his country has not "the slightest wish to embark upon an armament race." Does this mean that, having shaken off the objectionable ratio system, the Japanese will be content to let present ratios remain as they are on a de facto basis? If so, disastrous competition in the building of naval armament can be avoided. If not, more powerful fighting machinery is likely to appear on every sea.

Apparently the delegates at London are proceeding with the conference, without representation from Tokyo, on the assumption that there will be no enlargement of that government's fleet. As The Post suggested in a recent editorial, an agreement may be reached by the four remaining powers, with an escape clause permitting adjustment of restrictions if and when Japan undertakes a naval building program. Such an arrangement would clearly throw upon the Tokyo government full responsibility for any naval race that might be precipitated.

In any event the present situation calls for intelligent restraint, in this country as well as in Japan and other naval powers, to avoid magnifying apparently insoluble differences into a cause for recriminations and hostility.

High Compliment.

Americans ashamed of the circumstances which prompted the Lindbergh family to leave this country should take particular pleasure in the news that Dr. Albert Einstein has made his first application for citizenship papers. This eminent scientist pays the United States a high compliment in so doing.

By coincidence, on the same day, there was celebrated in New York City the second anniversary of the "University in Exile," otherwise the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science. Founded as a haven for German scholars driven abroad by Nazi persecution, the unique institution has been aptly described as "the only free German faculty in the world." In a letter to its directors on the occasion of the celebration, President Roosevelt spoke very happily for the Nation in characterizing the undertaking as symbolic of American intellectual, religious and racial freedom and in wishing it a brilliant future.

What is felt for New York's valued guests on the Graduate Faculty goes doubly, and more so, for Dr. Einstein. His quiet refusals to babble for benefit of the press or newsreels; his unassuming attitude in declining to address a scientific meeting "because he had nothing more to add," alone would make him a welcome addition even without his inspiring genius for research in the infinities. Moreover, he likes strawberry ice cream cones.

The pity of it is that there is apparently no way for Congress to grant him honorary citizenship immediately. As it is, we must wait until the autumn of 1938 to claim Einstein as an American by choice.

It might not be such a bad idea for the world to go to the dogs now and then. It might learn something of friendliness and loyalty.

"One American in four knows how to drive an automobile," reports a statistician. But so often it's one of the other three who's behind the wheel.

Catching His Thumb.

A Good Neighbor League?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The other night, while the President was talking in his very fine way about good neighbors, I listened to him over the radio, and the thought came to me, "Who is my neighbor?"

Remembering Christ's story of neighborliness, I just wondered who in the City of Washington really knew who their next door-neighbor really was.

I know Christ's definition was not regarding proximity, but the one who needed us.

I am a stranger in this great city, coming from a distant State, have been in a neighborhood several weeks, have people living within 25 feet of me, and yet not one person in this town has paid the slightest attention, outside of trade people, to me or mine.

What does this signify? What does it mean, when people move into a neighborhood of homes, where people live, laugh, love or grieve as the case may be, and no one ever speaks or contacts them, in any way?

I was the other day in one of the great cities of America, and this same theme, was the topic of conversation. People are lonely, they are starved for the milk of human kindness, if you please. The souls of men are being dwarfed, by the snub, by the indifference, the careless stare of their neighbors.

It seems that a "League of Good Neighbors" might be apropos, at this very time, and if the idea was carried out with the true intent and purpose it could be made as effective or perhaps more so than a League of Nations. C. E. M.

Motormen's Responsibilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the past week I have been reading about your current campaign to curtail traffic accidents in Washington.

This is, no doubt, a splendid thing, and should receive the whole-hearted co-operation of every motorist.

However, why should we place the entire blame for our many accidents on the motorist alone? Why not also go after some of the many reckless bus drivers and street-car motormen? I am convinced your reporters would have little trouble in locating constant violations such as passing red lights, speeding, etc.

Nine people have been killed so far in Washington, five of the nine by street cars. Don't you think this deserves some thought? I. L. G.

Not Borah.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of the several candidates proposed for the Republican nomination for President in 1936, William E. Borah is probably the least desirable and, if nominated, the least likely to win. In the opinion of many, Senator Borah is too old to run for so important a position. Furthermore, he is unfortunate in being of that type of politician who is never satisfied unless his ideas predominate, regardless of the party with which he is associated. This may partly account for Mr. Borah's inconsistency in seeking nomination in Republican primaries and election at the polls, and afterward lining up with the Democratic Party in favor of measures sponsored by a Democratic Administration.

Mr. Borah, like Senator Norris and others of similar bent of mind, is not a proper expression of Republican Party sentiment and principles. Why these men should wear the Republican label, sit on the Republican side in the Senate chamber, and at the same time join hands with the Democrats, is past the comprehension of people capable of sound reasoning.

No Place To Walk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pleasant, useful and safe highways require planning for the pedestrian as well as for the vehicle using the road. It is a feeble gesture, and a deadly one, to instruct pedestrians by signs to "walk against traffic;" it is an admission that danger exists for him and that he must be ready to jump to avoid accident. This lack of a place for pedestrians to walk results annually in some 10,000 accidents of which 2,000 are listed as fatal.

A great system of highways has grown up in the rural sections that is without pedestrian paths such as are common in European countries and, except in the suburbs of some cities, little attempt has been made to provide paths until recently when Federal road building funds were made available for footpaths.

Which brings us to walking as a creation, not to mention the beneficent effects on the mind and body of walking free from the anxiety of possible automobile accidents. Who does not remember with pleasure walking expeditions in which dodging motor vehicles played a minor part? It is difficult to avoid highways on such expeditions to the store or elsewhere; all highways have automobiles nowadays. And so, the dangers of the road must be faced in much the same spirit that the pioneers faced the dangers of the wilderness. C. R. T.

Front End Boarding.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of all the changes made recently to speed up and improve the car service here, none have proved less practical than the ruling permitting people with passes to board the car on the front end.

Does this save time? If it does, and this I doubt very much, the little time saved is wasted by the time needed to get off the car. There used to be a time once when passengers could easily get off a car by simply moving toward the front end. Now you can't get off at either end. You have to actually fight your way along and the incoming passengers fill up both exits.

I urge that the car company go back to the old ruling—that is, one door to get on and one door to get off. It will do away with a lot of the jostling now prevalent. W.E.

Two Bumps For Bophocles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been my painful misfortune to have read two unsound letters by Post reader, Bophocles, or a sophist run wild. The first of these, advocating United States adherence to the League of Nations, was mawkishly absurd by its impractical assumptions. However, if it be possible, his second letter appearing today, is even more irresponsible.

I agree that the only way for the farmer to be prosperous lastingly is for the rest of the country to be employed. But has it ever occured to pundit Bophocles that this proposition works conversely?

It is unfortunate that the operations of the capitalistic system separate and estrange the consumer from the producer's situations and struggles, except in so far as he, the consumer, is a producer; but that is the sacrifice we must necessarily make for the high efficiency that the system offers. The relations of every individual are so amazingly interdependent in this society that real prosperity can only be reached and reasonably maintained when all are afforded a share of the national income. The reason why agriculture received such benefits was because it is the only sound foundation upon which prosperity may be built. The increased income of the farmers of the Nation has been largely responsible for the increased business activity registered in the last six months.

"Business is squarely against the President; and he is squarely against business" (Bophocles). The voting this year will determine if the first of these is true, which I refuse to accept. But Bophocles truly exceeds his usual exaggeration, when he states that the President is squarely against business. Has not the President repeatedly declared his friendship for the real, honest American man and his enmity only to the Wall Street barons that are again trying to regain their abdicated powers? When Bophocles says "industry is stagnant, broadly speaking," he shows an obvious disregard of the undeniable facts that indicate unquestionably a return to prosperity.

The Supreme Court has demolished the NRA and AAA, which "Boph" says indicates that the country is ready to throw Roosevelt out. May I advance the opinion that the Supreme Court's rulings now and in the future will admirably serve to reelect Roosevelt. We shall see.

In the meantime I earnestly hope that Bophocles will use his talents to better advantage than disturbing honest citizens with specious and visionary arguments. I suggest he seek employment in the gas works.
SOPHOCLES.
Washington, Jan. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to reply to Bophocles regarding the resuscitation of industry before agriculture.

Let me first remind Bophocles that agriculture came before industry—and that if all the cities and their factories were blown into eternity America could still go on as long as she has the soil from which the wealth of this great country is mined.

We had in the AAA the best kind of a program that could be hastily conceived to correct the bad mess that years of indifference to agricultural problems had created. Directly through the efforts of this program the dried-up streams were again beginning to sing a song of quickening prosperity. Who can deny the signs that are so obvious all over the country? Who can deny the new demand for farm machinery and tools and household equipment that emanates directly from farm homes that had for years lived alone on their own momentum?

No, Bophocles, our national problems will not be solved by ditching agriculture, but only through an intelligent effort to study the basic problems from which the monkey wrench has not yet been effectively removed can we arrive at a satisfactory solution. Provided that the solution is followed by action such as our present Administration affords us, we shall most assuredly come out victorious.

B. Franklin, Politician

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN was born in Boston 230 years ago today, and when the Democrats hold their national convention in Philadelphia they will probably, to paraphrase Artemus Ward, hear about him at least once.

They have already heard about the Constitution. It's what's flung up the New Deal.

"The Constitution," wrote B. Franklin, when it was still very young and unamended, "is in actual operation; everything appears to promise that it will last; but in this world nothing is cerain but death and taxes."

The prophet, you will observe, was also sage and hedged his bet.

As one Postmaster General to another Mr. Farley will be quick to do honor to Dr. Franklin, rejoicing in the fact that they have at least one thing in common.

* * * *

Franklin was the first duly authorized Postmaster General appointed by Congress, but the first Postmaster General appointed by a President and a member of his Cabinet was Samuel Osgood. He was in Washington's Cabinet. And there had been postmaster generals under the Crown before Franklin. One of them, Col. Spotswood, in 1737, made Franklin a deputy postmaster, and 16 years later, after continuous service, the Philadelphia printer was made a deputy postmaster general for the colonies under the Crown.

Harry S. New, Postmaster General in the Hoover Administration, once wrote of Franklin as the father of the United States postal system and went far toward proving his point. But even this honor is mildly disputed by Matthew Page Andrews, who favors William Goddard, printer of the Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser, declaring that it is from Goddard's postoffices rather than from the British colonial post that the present postoffice system traces its descent.

But no matter. What is important is that while Franklin was on the job he inaugurated the penny post in large cities; he increased the frequency of trips between Philadelphia, New York and Boston; he straightened routes and speeded up post riders; he saw to it that all newspapers were admitted to the mails without discrimination; and he advertised unclaimed letters. And during his incumbency he drew no salary but, instead, made good the deficit during lean years, and at last made the postoffice a paying institution.

* * * *

Yes,indeed, all this should interest Mr. Farley. And Mr. Farley, doubtless, should be glad to meet Dr. Franklin half way as a politician. There are two definitions of a politician and one of them is not flattering.

The boy who landed in Philadelphia with two loaves early learned that half a loaf is better than no bread. Though he could change his viewpoint with amazing quickness his mind was no weathercock; but rather a trim craft sensitive to the winds. He knew his goal; that remained unchanged; but when it seemed advisable to tack he tackfuly tacked.

Franklin showed no evidence of pique when at the congress of commissioners at Albany his plan for colonial defence was turned down. It called for the appointment of a President General by the Crown and the election of a council by the colonies. With a union thus effected, he thought, the colonies would be able to defend themselves against their enemies without assistance from England. It is interesting to guess at what the course of history would have been had his plan been adopted.

* * * *

But the plan found favor on neither side of the Atlantic. The Lords of Trade (says John Bigelow) feared that such a union would show the colonies their strength. The fervid attachment of each colony to its own individual liberties (says George Bancroft) repelled the overruling influence of a central power. And even if the other colonies had agreed to it (says Matthew Page Andrews) it is improbable that Maryland would have acquiesced. Maryland's lower house passionately declared that such a plan would "ultimately subvert their happy form of government."

Franklin accepted the verdict without heat. "The best public measures," he concluded, "are seldom adopted from previous wisdom, but are forced by the occasion." And that was that.

His acquiescence to the stamp act, when he considered it inevitable, had more serious implications. He wrote to a friend, "The tide was too strong for us. We might as well have hindered the sun's setting, but since it is down, my friend, and it may be long before it rises again, let us make as good a night of it as we can. We may still light candles." And he busied himself with getting a job for a friend as stampmaster.

But that was one time when Franklin wholly failed to gauge the temper of his people. They lit no candles. They raised a bigger blaze. And the blaze was probably fiercer in Maryland than elsewhere.

* * * *

But what's one little error in a good game? Franklin later appeared before the British Parliament and under examination there explained the evils of the stamp act and its probable consequences. He was very largely instrumental in bringing about its repeal. Burke said (and here we are quoting John Bigelow) it reminded him of a master being examined by a parcel of schoolboys.

There is greatness here, but it need dismay no Tammany Tiger. A cat may look at a king.

Meaning Of Peace

Paris, Jan. 16.

THERE is great anxiety regarding the speech to be delivered to his constituents tomorrow by Mr. Anthony Eden, young and beautiful foreign secretary of His Majesty's government. Mr. Eden is a firm believer in the League of Nations, where he has been a dashing figure among the somewhat paunchy politicians of the old type and one of the most bloodthirsty pacifists in the world.

Being only 38 years old, he belongs to the generation which lost its soul and which was going to see to it that the mistakes of the elders never again were visited upon the youth of the world. Mr. Eden is also extremely sensitive, and he was terribly, terribly vexed with Signor Mussolini a few months ago when Il Duce refused to regard him as a diplomatic equal and treated him as a messenger boy. Mr. Eden was Britain's second-string foreign secretary at the time, in charge of Britain's business with the League of Nations, but Mussolini, who may have been jealous of his fatal beauty, intimated that His Majesty would have to send down a grown-up man if he wanted to do business with Italy.

The handsome British statesman offered to show Mussolini his birth certificates, his diploma and a letter of recommendation from his bishop proving that he was over 21 and uncommonly bright for his age, but still Mussolini declined to take him seriously. Finally Mr. Eden jerked a handkerchief out of his sleeve and, wiping his mustache with a haughty gesture, said: "Very well, then; the British fleet will come down to Naples and make a demonstration."

To that Signor Mussolini replied that if the British fleet came down to Naples it would never go back to England, and Mr. Eden returned to Geneva determined to loose against Italy all the conspirators in the Palace of Peace.

IL DUCE seems to be a bit of a gossip in his spare time and somewhat given to telling his Black Shirt "yes men" what he did to Philadelphia Jack O'Brien. Thus in a very short time the story of his interview with "Pretty Boy" Eden was being told in every bar and night club in Rome where the Black Shirts gathered.

Mussolini went into his act for Mr. Eden. He popped his eyeballs, put out his chin and told his majesty's second-string foreign secretary that this time Britain was not dealing with a lot of barefoot Africans dancing around a missionary in a cast-iron pot but with a modern nation which was ready to chase the British fleet clear up to Gibraltar if they tried one of their demonstrations.

The Black Shirts are quite juvenile in some ways, and they were very proud of the way Il Duce talked to Mr. Eden that day. Even now any little ballila in the street can give you an imitation of Il Duce putting on the glare and pointing to the door and of Mr. Eden looking at himself in the mirror.

The British government then decided that Mussolini was a wild-eyed nut who just might be crazy enough to do exactly as he threatened, and from that time on strove to enlist allies among the nations of the League. There were plenty of allies to be had, but all they were willing to do was to hold Britain's coat. And then the British government, thinking it over, decided that in that case Britain might lose not only her fleet but her coat as well.

• • • •

JUST before Christmas the League of Nations scattered for the holidays. The man who is called by the Black Shirts the English "Charm Boy" was promoted to the varsity in place of Sir Samuel Hoare, the celebrated fancy skater who flies through the air with the greatest of ease attired in acrobat's tights. Sir Samuel Hoare had fallen on his face while skating in Switzerland and was compelled to wear his nose in a sling for some time, as it was fractured in three places. While in this crippled condition he was removed from office and "Mad Anthony," the ferocious pacifist, was moved up to the varsity squad.

He is the first member of the generation which lost its soul who has had the chance to make this world a place for heroes to live in. Since then, however, Mr. Eden has had nothing to say, and this silence, coupled with the temporary dispersal of the League of Nations, has raised the menace of peace over Europe.

• • • •

THE rains have started, the Italian campaign in Abyssinia is beginning to flop and it will not be strictly necessary to avenge the feelings of the multo bello foreign secretary by force of arms. This is, of course, unless Mr. Eden in his speech on Friday insists on proving that he isn't a mere boy but a grown man with full legal rights to carry matches, buy beer and stay out as late as he wants.

Things have been very quiet for three weeks, and there is a feeling that if the League and Mr. Eden were suppressed for another month or two the shadow of peace would darken the continent.

Meanwhile, also, Adolf Hitler has been very quiet, and that is the most ominous peace of all. For the longer Hitler peacefully prepares for war the more frightful he will be when he suddenly decides that France has gone far enough.

Mobile Constitution

Charles Austin Beard Looks Ahead To Day The Supreme Court, On Historical Precedent, May Have To Forget AAA Ruling.

By Karl Schriftgiesser.

WHENEVER Charles Austin Beard, with his benign face and shock of white hair, rises to make an address an air of expectancy hovers about the room. Generally it is a foregone conclusion that he will say something. If you attended the banquet of education at the Mayflower Hotel last spring and heard him slowly, deliberately and scholarly draw v e r b a l pictures of the framers of the Constitution you will know what I mean. It was almost a case of "It isn't so much what he said, you know, as the way he said it;" only what he says is pretty nearly always important. Several people gasped, I recall, when—in an aside—he disposed of William Randolph Hearst in two sentences far more damaging than another's whole speech would have been. He may look benign, under that shock of white hair, but he knows how to use his fists.

There was a time, not so long ago, when to read the now famous history which he and his wife wrote was to mark one off as an extreme liberal. I know of no person who has not felt, after reading "The Rise of American Civilization" for the first time, a fine exhilaration. It is one of those "adventures among the masterpieces" of which literary sentimentalists used to speak. The number of people, who have discovered through it that there is much more to history than the date of the Boston Massacre or the Battle of Shiloh, is inestimable. But now the radicals are wont to pass him off as an old man, to call him the Sage of New Milford, Conn., and jibe at him because his personal desire is to live, among his blooded cattle, a life of ease and quiet.

• • • •

THAT may be what he would like to do but, like that other grand old man, Dr. John Dewey, he is unable to hide himself away from what is going on in the world. Just the other night he was making another speech, a lively and even spirited address, about a subject upon which he is widely considered almost as great an authority as nine other old men. I mean the Constitution, a document with which he is very familiar and for which he has a wholesome respect. A group of Senators, Representatives and appointive officials of the Government sat at his feet and listened as though a sage were speaking from a high place, not more than two steps down from the Olympian heights whence speaks the voice of Final Authority at 12 noon, sharp, on Mondays.

Perhaps they listened most attentively because Dr. Beard is not a lawyer but has spent the better part of his lifetime studying the framework of government without forgetting how to make himself clear. He told them in effect that the Constitution, which has been variously called our "beacon, our ark of the covenant, our lighthouse, and our sheet anchor," is hardly any of those. One sort of gathered that it is almost as mobile as the trumpeter's jazz which goes down and around and comes out here, sometimes with a terrific" whoo-oo." At any rate he declared, citing his precedents and authorities after the manner of all who discourse on this subject, that the Constitution was only what "the American people in their practice under it have thought it to be; just that, and little if anything more." Which leaves plenty of room for argument.

• • • •

BUT the thing which impressed his listeners most was not his compelling analysis of past actions so much as his rather cruel and witty picture of what the future might hold in store for the harassed dwellers in that marble temple of justice. Dr. Beard is one of the least academic of all our professors and one of his best handled tools is irony, whose shaft he handles lightly and with deft twists of the wrist. And so it was delightful to see him standing there, looking so benign beneath his white shock of hair, and yet being so realistic withal.

His intimation was that the recent AAA ruling might be a dangerous one if the Constitution were not so mobile. For the Hoosac Mills case to stand the test of time, he told us, we would have to conjure up a future devoid of any national crisis, without unemployment, without distress among the farmers. Unless such a Utopia were achieved then the Supreme Court might very well, upon some future date, have to lock the AAA ruling up in a dark closet and forget all about it. Dr. Beard, being an historian and an idealist, suggests that this might very well happen. Such things have occurred in the past, he recalled.

"It would be, and may well be, one of the ironies of the ages," he said, to profound silence, "if it should fall the lot of the Republican Party to restore to the Government the powers recently taken away from it." Under the auspices of that party, the man who has read so much, said the Dred Scott decision was wiped out by act of Congress, the Supreme Court was deprived of jurisdiction to pass upon reconstruction p r o v i s i o n s, the Court's decision in the legal tender cases was reversed, and the constitutional amendment anduoing the income tax decision was submitted to the country. "A party that has been so broad in its constitutional views and so cavalier in its treatment of controverted judicial rulings may well continue its historic role."

• • • •

I THOUGHT, listening there in the dining room of the Cosmos Club, that it must be lots of fun to be an historian, to know all those things, and so to be able to look into the future that way. And it dawned on me that perhaps we are inclined to say too easily the phrase, "the death knell of this or that was sounded today by a decision of the United States Supreme Court," or, on the other hand, "observers here felt today that the Constitution was doomed . . ."

"Yes, it is a good thing to have the sage of New Milford come down off his Connecticut farm every now and then into the turmoil of things going on and read to us out of his many books," said a man to whom I put this as we were leaving. And I thought he was right.

Winter Urge.

I wanna be a ski jumper.
I wanna leap across snow-filled valleys . . . fly through cold, clear air . . . allez cop! . . . like that!
For no good reason. In fact, I can't understand it.
I come from a family of non-ski jumpers.
All my ancestors were notable for not being ski jumpers.
I don't know of a relative who ever went around jumping through space, hot or cold.
It can't be heredity.

• • • •

Maybe it's the Swiss in me.
But no; it can't be that.
For there is no Swiss in me. I have it from my doctor, who looked me over last week.
It's all very puzzling.

• • • •

All the more so because I hate snow. And ice . . . ugh!
As a matter of fact, I dislike slipping. I bruise easily.
I neved had a ski in my life.
I don't know whether you put them on over your head or otherwise.
But still I yearn to jump.
It doesn't make sense.

• • • •

Maybe it's those newsreels. Or all those sports page pictures.
They are reeking with men and women flying through space and apparently very happy. They make ski jumping seem irresistible.
Anyhow, it's in my blood now.
I must go ski jumping at once.
No long jumps, at first. Just a half mile or so.
And not too high, if you don't mind.
I'm no hog.

• • • •

But I must feel the rush of clean, cold air by my ears . . .
The crackle of the icy atmosphere . . .
The sharp, swift descent . . .
The graceful take-off . . .
Or nearly so!

Who-o-o-o-oppps!

M e t e o r-like, comet-like, bird-like . . .
What?

The gymnast of the eternal snows!
The man on the flying trapeze!
The acrobat of the stratosphere!
Hot cha!

Gangway!
The spell is on me . . .
I must away to the ski jump . . .
Stand by, folks!

Documents List America's Road To War in 1917

State Department Expert Publishes Four-Year Survey of Policy.

How the United States, holding to the policy of freedom of the seas, was drawn into the maelstrom of the World War was graphically portrayed in documents, previously unpublished, that were released to the public last night by the State Department.

The documents, some of which were sources used by the Nye committee investigating munitions on Capitol Hill at the present time, while published coincident with that investigation, are being released in normal course after four years of "odd moments' work" by Carlton Savage, of the department's Division of Research and Publication, the department indicated.

Some observers believed, however, that it was possible the release of these documents at this time would tend to correct the picture of wartime relations and policies of the United States with other nations now being drawn by the Nye committee. They pointed to the fact that the Nye group used some documents and suppressed others, thus perhaps distorting the picture afforded by a complete publication of the entire series of international documents.

Drew Us Into War.

The United States, according to the survey prepared by Savage, was entangled more and more as time went on in diplomatic meshes that inevitably drew the country into war on the side of the Allies.

This gradual loss of neutrality, almost entirely through the freedom-of-the-seas policy, came about gradually from the very outbreak of the war, the chronological account shows.

Beginning in August, 1914, this volume, second of a two-volume survey of American neutrality practice during wartime, outlines the serious diplomatic quarrels between Great Britain and this country over the question of possible interference by the allied powers with American shipping.

In London on February 26, 1909, all of the great nations had gathered to outline the laws of naval warfare, and had signed a document thenceforth known as the Declaration of London, which in a series of points, defined the duties of both belligerents and neutral nations in event of war. When war began in 1914, none of the signatory nations had ratified the document.

Sought Agreement.

Acting Secretary of State Robert Lansing immediately began efforts to get the consent of all powers concerned in the World War to abide with the articles set forth in the Declaration of London. This inquiry was made on August 6, 1914. Germany and Austria-Hungary answered that they would observe its rules if all other nations did so. Great Britain, however, added certain modifications of its own, and the tenor of these changes was to nullify the freedom of the seas. France nd Russia adhered to the British stand.

Briefly, the British said that conditional contraband, which would be goods consigned to or from an agent of the enemy state or to or from a merchant or other person under the control of the authorities of the enemy state, was "liable to capture to whatever port the vessel is bound and at whatever port the cargo is to be discharged."

Acting Secretary Lansing held, however, that destination to enemy territory properly could not be considered sufficient ground for seizing foodstuffs or other conditional contraband unless they were destined for the use of the armed forces or of a government department of an enemy state.

He said that the British modifications made neutral trade between neutral ports dependent upon the pleasure of belligerents, and gave belligerents the advantages of an established blockade without the necessity of an adequate naval force.

Seizures Related.

From there on the State Department's survey threads through the long and difficult course that the United States trod (over 400 documents are listed) through the sharp British dispute that ended in resigned American acceptance of the situation after several American vessels carrying cargoes to neutral European ports were seized and detained.

President Wilson later wrote Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan on March 24, 1915, that the United States was "face to face" with something the British government intended to do and that "they are going to do it no matter what representations we make." By then American sympathies were definitely enlisted on the Allied side, due to various causes, and the British counted heavily on this, it appeared.

Throughout the documents appears the strong contrast of America's past wartime policy with that now being outlined on Capitol Hill. During the Wilson Administration the American Government sought to maintain the right of trade with belligerents as well as neutrals. This Wilson worked for with all the moral force at his command, in the midst of the fierce struggle for naval supremacy between Germany and the Allies, the survey shows.

Under the present temporary neutrality law a strict ban on exports of war implements to belligerents is provided, citizens travel at their own risk on ships of combatants, and proposals are being considered which would stringently control all trade in other essential war supplies. A committee in the Senate yesterday receded somewhat from the isolation policy to amend the Administration's permanent neutrality bill to provide protection for American commerce under the President's direction.

Nye Assailed as Two Senators Bolt Munitions Investigation

its investigation to conform with this objective, it will have our full support."

Afterward, Pope explained that this did not mean that he and George were resigning from the committee. He said they expected to be present and vote upon the final conclusions.

Nye immediately replied in tones almost as quiet as those used by Pope in reading the statement.

He said that there has been no avenue of investigation pursued that had not first been approved by a majority of the committee.

Can't Help Stepping On Toes.

"The chair," he said, "has taken no pleasure in some of the avenues pursued in this investigation. The chair admits a weakness in that he does not know enough to stop when somebody's toes get in the way."

Nye said he regretted Pope's reference to degeneration of the purposes of the investigation and that Pope was not present at the Wednesday hearing.

"There was no malice in my statement that President Wilson and Secretary Lansing had falsified when they were asked whether they knew of so-called secret treaties of Great Britain and her allies. Invariably Lansing and Wilson said they had no knowledge of these treaties."

He said that in this respect "both departed from the facts."

"I am not going to be resentful if there is resentment on the part of some members of this committee, as long as there is a possibility of lessening the chances of our being drawn into war.

"There has been no animus on the part of any member of this committee."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, a member of the committee, expressed his admiration for the memory of Wilson, but added that the commercial factor was "an inevitable and irresistible impulse" in getting the country into the World War.

Should Reveal History.

"Our purpose," he said, "is to try to quarantine this impulse. History has been rewritten in the last 48 hours. It is important that history should be revealed in all its nakedness, no matter what it shows. Our function is not to prosecute anybody. I intend to co-operate objectively to do everything to keep America out of war."

He stressed the word "objectively."

Nye continued his reply to Pope with the statement that some editorial writers had indicated "that the committee is atempting to find a villain."

"The witnesses here will testify," he continued, "that there has been no effort by the committee to make them appear as villains who were trying to drag 100,000,000 people into war.

"The chair is convinced from the record that in 1914, 1915 and 1916, in each instance in which American commerce was in conflict with our neutrality policy, that policy was made to get out of the way. When the record is complete I think this will be clearly shown."

Nye said that in 1916 he was a newspaper editor and that he had supported Wilson for re-election.

Says He Supported Wilson.

"I have no animus to get even with someone whom I opposed politically, for my record is one of support," he said.

At the close of the day's hearing Nye announced that the committee would be adjourned until next Thursday, when the Morgan partners will appear again.

Referring to the appropriation for the munitions investigation, Connally said in his Senate speech:

"So far as I am concerned I have voted just about all the money that I am going to vote from the people of America who really want peace and who are devoted to peace, to the exploitation of the Committee on Munitions. They have already spent $125,000 and they want $50,000 more. Mr. President, in real truth the Government would save money if we were to appropriate a lump sum and turn it over to some advertising agency and tell them to devote it to the chairmanship of the committee and put the rest of the money in their pockets."

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, revealed that some of the work of the committee had been done by WPA workers and that they had been paid from work relief funds.

"Does the Senator mean that the Munitions Committee is on the relief rolls?" Connally asked.

Asks Authority for "Snooping."

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, a member of the Munitions Committee, who has been working with Nye, repeatedly attempted to interrupt Connally, but finally said he would answer when Connally was through.

Connaly said he cared nothing about the secret treaties.

"But where is the authority for this committee to go snooping around through the secret files of the State Department and drag out documents of foreign powers and other things of that kind that might embarrass a nation and might cause other governments to charge us with bad faith?" he asked.

Referring again to the fact that Nye was not present in the Senate, Connally said:

"He will come rushing in, probably tomorrow or some other time, a press release in one hand and a copy of some proceedings over there in the committee in the other hand, and try to make a reply. I want to express the indignation that I feel and that I am sure is felt by practically every Senator who was here during the World War at this unseemly, this almost scandalous effort to besmear and besmut the records of America in the World War.

"Now, after 18 years, those who see visions and who listen to the voices of ghosts, who prowl around graveyards, come forth and try to tell us: 'You think you knew why you went into the war. You did not go into the war because you wanted to. You did not go into the war because Germany sank American ships and murdered American men and women. You did not go into the war because Germany sent her submarines this side of the international law of the world and sent women and children down to watery graves with the American flag in some cases floating above them.'

Committee Is Assailed.

"'Oh, no,' the Munitions Committee says, out of the depths of its wisdom, out of its occult powers, out of its marvelous connection with the stars of the heavens which we ordinary mortals never understand. This committee tells us now in solemn pronouncement, 'You did not go into the war for these causes. You went into the war because some big, bad wolf, a munitions maker, and Mr. Lloyd George bulldozed you into the war, made you go into the war, fooled you into the war, conspired against you and dragged you in while you did not know it. Some international woman of the streets, lurking at the corner of an alley, enticed Uncle Sam down the alley and got him into war.'" as "that courageous knight of peace," challenged the Munitions Committee chairman "to either come here and confirm the language which he used, or rise on the floor and eat his words."

In his reply, Clark said that if Connally had read the record of the Munitions Committee he would not have made his statements. He declared that the present investigation is in direct compliance with the resolution authorizing it.

"Never has so much important information, afforded as a basis for legislation, been obtained for the Senate for such a small cost as has been done by the Munitions Committee on the appropriations heretofore made by this body," he said.

Clark said that Connally should have spent more time becoming familiar with the work of the committee and not so much "agitating against an oil embargo."

Connally Asks Meaning.

Clark replied that he was referring to statements made by Connally in the Foreign Relations Committee. He added he was imputing no unworthy motive to Connally.

"He had better not do so," Connally snapped. He added that he had not mentioned oil in the committee.

Clark denied he had ever said Wilson or Lansing falsified. He added that their statements had been "inconsistent."

Getting back to the reference to oil embargoes, Connally asked Senator Johnson (Republican), California, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, to testify that he had not mentioned the subject.

"Let me say," Johnson said, "that if any man is guilty of mentioning oil in the Foreign Relations Committee, I am that man.

"I am the one who asked the Secretary of State whether or not there had been an embargo upon oil to Italy. I asked the question with the distinct purpose which I readily avow. I do not want this country to be levying sanctions upon any nation on the face of the earth at the behest of Great Britain or Great Britain's League of Nations.

Johnson Explains Purpose.

"I do not want—and I say it frankly—to lead the way in sanctions in this difficulty abroad so that again America will be out on a limb, and America will be leading in a European controversy."

Clark later explained that he obtained his information about Connally's alleged opposition to oil embargoes from a member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

"I would not break faith with a man who told me in public what had transpired in a secret committee meeting if I were the Senator from Missouri," Connally said. "I would respect that confidence."

Connally explained that what he did in the committee was to oppose the provision of the proposed neutrality law that American shippers must ship to belligerents at their own risk.

Hull Would Bar Move to Exempt Nations at War

House Leaders See Floor Fight as Neutrality Hearings End.

By the Associated Press.

The Administration balked yesterday at a move in the House Foreign Affairs Committee to exempt Italy and Ethiopia from operations of the proposed permanent neutrality law.

After hearing Secretary Hull's opposition to such an exemption, Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, said he was confident no amendment along that line would be approved by the committee, although he expected a floor fight over the proposal.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, nevertheless, has drafted an amendment to make the legislation inapplicable to nations now at war. He proposes to present it when the committee starts polishing up the bill today. Some committeemen said they favored the change, since any alteration of neutrality rules during the progress of the East African conflict might lay the Nation open to charges of taking un-neutral action discriminatory against Italy.

Hearings at End.

The legislation, which McReynolds predicted would remain unchanged in major aspects, would continue mandatory embargoes on movements of arms and munitions to warring countries; limit credits of belligerents, and give the President the right, in his discretion, to embargo materials that could be turned to war uses.

McReynolds said his position, and that of the Administration, is that application of the legislation to countries now fighting could not be considered un-neutral and a change of policy during the course of a war.

The temporary neutrality act, he contended, provides for embargoes on implements of war; and President Roosevelt supplemented that with a declaration that the policy of the Government would be to discourage any shipments of war materials to belligerents in excess of normal trade.

Battle Over Embargoes.

The principal battle in the committee, McReynolds said, will revolve around the section giving the President permission to use his judgment in imposing embargoes on war materials. Some members want to make it mandatory.

In the Senate, more declarations for neutrality came from Senators Capper (Republican), Kansas, and Thomas (Democrat), Utah.

A one-year extension of the temporary neutrality act, due to expire February 29, was called for in a resolution introduced by Thomas. Enactment of "a permanent neutrality measure, that will leave no question where the United States stands," was urged in the Senate today by Capper.

Howell Lauds Philippine Plans to Develop Army

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution, expressed belief today on his return from the Philippines that an army which the island government is developing would assure stability.

This army will number 600,000 men in ten years, he said. As a nucleus it has the 30,000 men of the archipelago's constabulary.

Jury Called Illegal In Conspiracy Case

Alleging the District grand jury which indicted them was illegally impanelled because there were three notaries public and an official stenographer in the room when the evidence was heard, Joseph Silverman, jr., Nathan Silverman, Thomas Jefferson Ryan and Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Williams yesterday in the District Supreme Court filed motions to test the validity of the indictment.

The grand jury, because of a re- loosely drawn than in former years. cent act of Congress, now is more The law makes eligible for service numerous groups of persons formerly barred from sitting, and makes it necessary for the jury to have a stenographer to record proceedings.

The four men, all of whom have entered pleas of not guilty to a charge that they conspired to keep Frank E. Speicher away from the House Military Affairs Committee, which was inquiring into Army contracts, joined hands in a combined assault on the indictment.

Labor to Ask Probe Of Unemployment

Miami, Fla., Jan. 16 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor's executive council today decided to ask Congress to investigate the part played by modern machinery in causing unemployment.

At the same time, President William Greene announced the federation will conduct its own investigation—to determine, if possible, haw many workers the machine has displaced and what, if anything, may be done about it.

Obviously concerned over present-day industrial problems, Green, after today's council session, declared:

"There isn't an industry in the country that hasn't changed its entire method of production.

"Time was when the glass blowers were the aristocrats of industry. The yaren't any more. Skilled trades of all kinds have been seriously affected.

"The council realizes it calls for serious consideration and perhaps congressional action."

Green asserted there was "growing need and increased demand for the shorter work week."

4,000 in Missouri Will Get Pensions

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 16 (AP).—State pensions for Missouri's aged became a reality tonight as requisition blanks were mailed to applicants. Frst payments will be made within the next two weeks.

State Pension Commissioner Allen M. Thompson said the initial payments, reaching from $7 to $12 a month, would go to 4,000 applicants over 70 years of age.

The disbursements will be continued on a basis of 1,000 weekly until between 16,000 and 18,000 State residents have received pension installments. The old-age pension law, passed by the last Legislature, has been in effect five months. More than 30,000 have applied.

Estimating Missouri's average pension checks would be between $9 and $10 monthly, Thompson said the amount compares "very favorably" with payments made or planned in 38 other States that have pension laws. Missouri pensions will be paid from a $2,500,000 legislative appropriation.

Knox Charges New Deal Aims To Curb Court

Change in Constitution Also Sought, Asserts Publisher.

By the Associated Press.

East Lansing, Mich., Jan. 16.—Col. Frank Knox charged tonight that the Democratic Administration seeks "to handcuff the Supreme Court of the United States and to make over the Constitution."

The Chicago publisher, who invited Republicans yesterday to support him for the Republican Presidential nomination if Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, does not seek the nomination, spoke at the annual dinner of the Michigan Press Association and later over a radio hook-up.

The majority of American newspapers are critical of the Administration, he said, because of "their disillusionment in the President and his New Deal."

"No Administration in the more than 150 years of our history has possessed such autocratic power as the present Administration," he asserted, "and no Administration in all our history has ever been so greedy for more power."

Col. Knox charged that the Administration has "foisted" upon the United States, "wholly or in part, the 12 principal planks of the Socialist platform."

"The American people may well be afraid of what is at the end of the road of business and industrial regimentation," he said. "It is one thing—and only one thing. That is socialism, with its inevitable dictator."

A planned economy, the speaker said, is only another name for the steps taken by leaders in Russia, Italy and Germany that resulted in setting up dictatorships.

"We remain a free people today for only one reason," he asserted, "the presence of the Supreme Court."

Hoover Speech

tinued, "we would be able to employ more than all the acres put out of action by the New Deal. We would reverse this economy of scarcity to an economy of plenty."

"I believe we should be prepared to subsidize directly such special crops until agriculture has again been brought into balance."

The former President opened his discussion, fourth in a series in which he had criticized various features of the New Deal, with the statement that his proposals for farm relief "may shock those who believe in doing nothing for human ills" as well as those "who believe that all healing medicine comes off the collectivist brew."

He divided his talk into five parts, in the first he outlined reasons why the farm question was of National importance, the second was an exposition of the origin and aggravation of the farmers' troubles. They were traceable, he held principally to the World War and "its hectic aftermaths."

In part three, Hoover told what he believed the New Deal was doing to the farmers, along with all other citizens.

"This torrent of wasteful spending, unbalanced budget, and debt will be paid by the farmers as well as all others," he declared.

"Moreover, about ¼ of the $14,000,000,000 of probable increased New Deal debt will rest on the farm as a super-mortgage."

In the fourth division of his talk, Hoover attacked the claim of Administration spokesmen that the AAA and other farm projects had aided the farmer's business.

"The largest justification" (for the AAA)," said Hoover, "has been that it raised prices. Prices have improved.

But, he continued, "inflation of the dollar, the drought, and world recovery would have made higher prices in any event."

At the conclusion of his proposals for farm relief—the fifth section of his remarks—the former President pointed out that "the farmers of Russia had supported the Bolsheviki against the new-born democracy on the promise of land."

"Today they have the choice of Siberia or the collectivist farms.

"I have seen freedom, the most priceless heritage, torn from children that this generation might escape its responsibilities. I wish to say to you unhesitatingly that our country has been following step by step the road through which these millions of people in foreign countries lost their liberties. It must be the farmers of America who defend that heritage."

The former President spoke at the invitation of the Nebraska Republican State central committee. His address was broadcast.

'Liberal' Parties Join in Wisconsin

Milwaukee, Jan. 16 (AP).—A united front of "Liberal" ranks in Wisconsin was virtually assured today with the announcement that the Socialist Party had voted coalition with the Progressive Party of the LaFollette brothers.

The question immediately arising was whether Republicans and Democrats would also join forces so that Wisconsin would present to the Nation for the first time a clearcut political alignment of Liberals vs. Conservatives.

Such a Republican-Democratic fusion has been discussed many times, usually with the result that neither went farther than to say "you can vote for us if you want to."

The Socialist action was in the form of an approval, through a referendum vote of the party in the State, affiliation with the newly organized Farmer-Labor Progressive Federation.

Soldier's Medal Given To Hero of Epidemic

By the Associated Press.

Award of the Soldier's Medal to Master Sergeant Stanley R. Morgan of the Army Signal Corps for heroism during the influenza epidemic at Point Barrow, Alaska, last April and May, was announced yesterday by Secretary Dern.

Sergeant Morgan, the Army's telegraph operator at the Alaskan outpost, gave to the world the first news of the airplane disaster in which Will Rogers and Wiley Post were killed last August.

Text of Hoover's Speech at Lincoln, Nebr., Assailing Farm Relief Program

Lincoln, Nebr., Jan. 16 (A.P.).—The text of former President Herbert Hoover's address here tonight on the agricultural policies of the New Deal follows:

I have recently debated various realities of the New Deal at Oakland, New York and St. Louis. I propose now to explore it further, particularly its agricultural policies and their effect on the whole people.

The New Deal has developed a new technique in debate. They set up a glorious ideal to which we all agree unanimously. Then they drive somewhere else or into the ditch. When we protest they blackguard us for opposing the glorious ideal. And they announce that all protesters are the tools of Satan or Wall Street. When we summon common sense and facts they weep aloud over their martyrdom for the ideal.

New Deal Words Cited.

The New Deal explanation on their agricultural policies exceed 30,000,000 words. You will not expect me to turn the light into every dark corner in 30 minutes. Some of the rugged prima donnas who have directed these policies have resigned and said worse things than I would say. One quality of the old regulated individualists was teamwork.

Right at the outset let us get some things perfectly clear. There is an agricultural problem. It concerns the entire Nation. It concerns the happiness of 7,000,000 homes. Our country will not have reached either full moral or economic stature until confidence and hope shine in these homes. The problem is still unsolved.

Aside from its flagrant flouting of the Constitution, the New Deal farm method had within it destruction both to the farmers and to the Nation. A new program is necessary. It is now in the making. The Nation has a right to insist that it must be effetcive and it must be based upon sound principles.

I shall debate the subject in five directions.

Part one will be the reasons why the farm question is of national interest. I hope this part will be emphatic.

Part two is a few words upon the causes of the farmers' problems. I hope this part will not wholly spoil the stock in trade of many politicians, for they have to live also.

Part three is what the New Deal is doing to the farmer as a citizen, along with all other citizens. These are the things to avoid in the future. I hope this part will not be too sad.

Part four is what the New Deal has done to the farmer in his farming business. This is also sad.

Part five consists of some discussions of a new program. It may shock those who believe in doing nothing for human ills. It may shock those who believe that all healing medicine comes off the collective brew.

Unpleasant Features.

In all parts there are remarks on what the New Deal has been doing to the whole structure of human liberty and American institutions in the guise of farm relief.

Each part has unpleasant features to somebody. However, my position is such that approval by politicians and many others who live by the sweat of the farmers' brows is immaterial. If this country is to be saved as a decent place for the farmers' children and all our children to live in ordered liberty and faith of the future, we have a lot of unpleasant truth to face. In the long war for right thinking falsehood often wins the first battle. But truth always wins the last—if the Nation survives in the meantime.

Part I.

President Roosevelt, on December 9, at Chicago, properly stated one reason why the plight of the farmer is an issue which concerns all of the American people. He said, "Farm prosperity cannot exist without city prosperity, and city prosperity cannot exist without farm prosperity." Every President since George Washington, every public man, every economist and every school teacher has said the same thing. It is vitally true, even if it is not news. But the President omitted to state other reasons why his farm policies are an issue vital to the whole American people.

The first is that the urgent need of farm relief has been used as a power to impose the New Deal philosophy upon the American people. That is comprised of government by individuals in place of a government of laws. It comprises goose-stepping the people under this pinkish banner of planned economy. That was tried under the NRA, but the Supreme Court halted it early. It has had a longer march under the AAA. Step by step the New Deal agricultural policies advanced from cajolery with a genile rain of checks to open coercion. Men who planted on their own farms and sold in their own way the product which God and their own labor give them could have been sent to jail for doing just that. That is not liberty. That is collectivism.

Second Reason.

The second reason the President did not state was that those ideas of production control revolve upon planned scarcity, instead of the plenty upon which America alone has made progress. To stop the production of 50,000,000 fertile acres is not progress. That also concerns the whole people. Civilization has made progress solely through producing more and more of varied things. The whole history of humanity has been a struggle against famine and want.

Within only the last half-century America achieved a triumph in this age-long struggle by the creation of a system which at last can produce a plenty for a raesonable living for all of us. We have not solved the problem of its distribution, but in this plan of scarcity we are surrendering the very foundation of human hope.

The third reason was that the processing tax levied to support this program bore most heavily upon the 15,000,000 workers' homes. It was an undeserved burden to those women struggling to feed their men and their children. But the worst of that scheme was that it set boiling the witches' cauldron of class conflict of town against the farmers. This tax should never be revived.

Part II.

The causes of the farmer's troubles must be honestly faced if we are to have common-sense remedy. Economic patent medicines require no diagnosis except decision that the patient is in pain.

The difficulties of our agriculture came mainly from the war and its hectic aftermaths. Wars always do that to the farmer. Demoralization lasted 20 years after the Napoleonic wars and a dozen years after our own Civil War.

I am glad that the President at last admits that the war had something to do with the farm depression. At Chicago, on December 9, 1935, he says, in referring to farm prosperity in the period before the war: "They were the last years before the worldwide disturbance, caused by the World War, took place in our economic life." I had been told so often by the New Deal that I did it that I had given up hope of salvation. I feel better.

Wars Hit Farmers.

The dislocation of wars and slumps hits the farmer harder than any other group. Farm prices are more sensitive to these shocks than wages and industrial prices. All parts of the economic system inevitably come back into balance with time. But farm recovery is longer drawn out. That is the higher economics of it.

The painful symptoms of it appears in the farmer's pocket in the slump of purchasing power of his dollar. Many farmers can not hold on against these delays in readjustment. I have held that we can not see the capable and industrious driven from their homes during these periods if they want to make a fight for them. That is the humanity of it.

There is at least one hopeful aspect of these war causes of the farmers' difficulties. They do not last forever. Many of our measures can be of emergency character. Recovery will cure many difficulties—that is, if it is allowed by the New Deal to come.

Dollar Improvement.

When the world depression was turned, in June and July, 1932, agriculture prices rose in a start toward equality with industrial prices The farmer's dollar improved more than 20 per cent. Prices were moving into a natural relation again. Then came the era of the great fear. Fright over the coming of the New Deal skidded the country into the money and bank panic. The President said "the mechanics of civilization have come to a dead stop. Many a driver who has had a bad skid thinks that. Then began the magic of the New Deal. And they repeated each mistake of the Farm Board and added a big idea. That big idea is that you can catch an economic force with a policeman.

Incidentally, the culmination of that era of great fear is the convenient starting point for all of the President's comparative statistics. He chooses the low point of quotation induced by their own actions. If he would go back a few months into 1932, before the great fear started, he would find the prices were 80 to 100 per cent higher than those he quotes. And they were in 100-cent dollars. And even then they were only at the turning of the greatest depression in history. His quotations look like an effort to warm the Nation over cold glass chunks in an illuminated crate.

Part III.

Things have been done to the farmer by the New Deal which do not relate to agriculture.

Firstly, this torrent of wasteful spending, unbalanced budget and debt will be paid by the farmer as well as all others. It will blight all his days with anxiety. The farmer pays for it not alone in direct taxes, but hidden taxes that are wrapped in everything he buys. The farmer, in fact, pays in larger measure than any other group because he buys not alone for his family but also for his farm and is less able than any other production group to mark up the prices of his products and pass these taxes on to the consumer. Moreover, about one-quarter of the $14,000,000,000 of the probable increased New Deal debt will rest on the farm as a super-mortgage. Blessed are the young, for they shall inherit the national debt.

Secondly, the present policies of the New Deal by credit inflation produce stock blooms that are a great dole for the "money changers." President Roosevelt, on July 24, 1933, stated that we can not attain prosperity "in a Nation half boom and half broke." The New Deal has attained just that. That half boom is on in the stock exchange, the farmers are half broke—and the 20,000,000 on relief are fully broke. These credit booms add little to farm prices. When they crack they throw the farmer in the ditch.

"Currency Policies."

There is a thirdly, on currency policies. There is a fourthly, on making the farmers pay for a large part of the social security act and receiving little benefits. There is a fifthly, on relief policies which make it impossible for farmers to get labor in the midst of unemployment. There is a sixthly and a seventhly, on some other white rabbits. All of them make farm thinking difficult and intense. I do not have the time to discuss them all now.

Part IV.

If we are now to deal competently with farm relief we must examine the experience with the New Deal farm measures. There are proved dangers which must be avoided. In other words what have these New Deal principles done to the farmer?

President Roosevelt on one occasion said "I like to think of the AAA not as a temporary means . . . but as an expression of principle." From their practical works, irrespective of their words, the main principle is the economy of scarcity based on control of production enforced by telling the farmer what he can plant.

The largest justification has been that it has raised prices. Prices have improved. I leave you four thoughts on that subject: First, the inflation of the dollar, the drought and world recovery would have made higher prices in any event. Second, the Chicago Tribune is authority for the statement that the farmer's income from many uncontrolled commodities has been greater in proportion than from those which have had the attention of the New Deal. President Roosevelt on May 30, 1935, prophesied that "if we abandon crop control wheat will immediately drop to 36 cents a bushel and cotton to 5 cents a pound." He felt the same about hogs.

Sales by Farmers.

I do not know how long a time there is in "immediately." It is more than a week. Fourth, at the same time another principle of the New Deal was to lift wages and industrial prices. The sum of these two principles is that the farmer has less to sell and pays more for what he buys. Labor pays for it in increased cost of living. By this device we have got the economic dog running around in circles chasing his tail.

We may explore the effect of the processing tax in case someone might suggest we try it again. In early 1933 President-elect Roosevelt expressed himself as horrified and directed the defeat of my proposal to the Democratic Congress to balance the budget by a manufacturers' sales tax of 2½ per cent. My proposal exempted food and cheaper clothing. We did that in order that we should not impose the burden upon the poor. Yet, as President Roosevelt, he places a manufacturers' sales tax of 25 per cent on pork and 30 per cent on flour, both absolute essentials to the poor. That blow at the poor was no doubt softened by calling it a "processing" tax. The implication was that some wicked middle man would pay it. The housewife rebelled at this more abundant life. One result of it was that the consumption of food in 1935 fell below the worst year, 1932, by the product of over 15,000,000 acres.

1932 Worst Year.

We may explore what these New Deal principles did to our export and import market. You will remember that 1932 was the year when "it could not be worse." So we will take that worst year and compare it with the New Deal year of 1935. From that worst year exports of cotton have decreased 4,250,000 bales; our grain 93,000,000 bushels; our animal products by 500,000,000 pounds. This is estimated to be the product of about 2,000,000 acres. But, worse than that, this greatest food-producing country on earth has imported this year about 100,000,000 bushels of grain, 700,000,000 pounds of animal products, and increased its imports of vegetable oils to be used as substitutes by another 700,000,000 pounds.

It would take another probable 15,000,000 acres to produce these imports. The Secretary of Agriculture says America must choose one of three courses in foreign trade. The three are various degrees of the theory of more industrial imports in order that the American farmer may sell more to foreign countries. But what he produced was a fourth choice; that is, to give the foreign farmer the American farmers' market.

From all this decrease in home consumption and shift in foreign trade the farmer has lost the market for more acres than the whole New Deal curtailment of 50,000,000 fertile acres. Is that not the principle of the economic dog chasing his tail?

On January 10 President Roosevelt declared himself in opposition to "shipping our soil fertility to foreign nations." The logical conclusion of all that is to stop exports altogether.

Futility Expressed.

There is futility here somewhere. The idea is that we encourage imports of industrial products and create unemployment at home. We are told we must do this in order that the farmer may export his products. Now we are told that it is not to our advantage to export farm products at all. He overlooks the fact that we can manufacture synthetic fertilizers to any amount necessary to cover export of "soil fertility."

In May, 1932, when I vetoed a bill for reciprocal tariff treaties, I stated that most of such treaties would sacrifice the American farmer. The New Deal method in testing poison is apparently to make the Nation swallow it. By just these reciprocal treaties, the American market is today being opened to farmers of Cuba, Canada, Spain and Italy. Yet under these principles farmers are told they must allow fertile acres to be idle because there is no market for their products. It is very confusing. The economic dog whirls even faster under this stimulus.

We must explore as to where we get to when we start controlling crops. This principle of scarcity gets scarcer and scarcer. The moment one farm product was regimented another had to be mobilized to prevent the farmer's energy from going into that. So we marched from seven controlled commodities in May, 1933, to five more in April, 1934, another in May, 1934, and finally we come to potatoes in 1935. Moreover, these measures are moving steadily to more and more coercion and less rain of checks—as witness the cotton and potato acts. As I read further and further into the 6,250 verboten words of the potato law, I realize that one of the impulses to cheerfulness was about to be mashed out of American life. The potato had yielded not only food, but it had radiated humor to our daily conversation.

Happy Potatoes.

It was once the happiest of all vegetables. Its life would have been saddened by the bootlegger, the passive resister and the Federal inspectors. Confined to a package by law, its eyes would have been dimmed by the alphabetical revenue stamps it must bear.

One of the assured principles of New Deal farming is politics. One would think in the thunders of idealism that have accompanied planned agriculture it would be clean of politics. I have but one comment. That is to read two lines from a letter I hold written by a high officer in the AAA to a gentleman who spent his life in scientific work for the farmer and who was accepted for appointment in that service. It says:

It will be necessary (for you) to secure political clearance, which means a letter of approval from the Democratic National Committee in California. The Department of Agriculture was wholly under merit service before this sort of idealists got it. The execution of these principles required 120,000 part or full time Federal officials. Their pay was assessed against the farmers. This new breed of middlemen every day tried hard to bring agriculture into balance with politics.

We may explore the effect of this economy by scarcity and crop control upon employment. For instance, their reduction of cotton by 10,000,000 acres is producing a hideous poverty in the share croppers of the South. It is creating unemployment all over the Nation of some hundreds of thousands of agricultural laborers, railway men and others who formerly lived by producing and handling the 20,000,000 tons of agricultural products that could come from the acres forced into idleness.

System of Scarcity.

And above all other consequences the whole notion of regimenting the farmers under bureaucracy was the negation of the free American spirit. The system of scarcity was being applied to human freedom.

Does all this corroborate President Roosevelt's indication on December 9 at Chicago that agriculture is "making great strides" toward a "balance either within itself or with industry and business?" If so, it was a juggler's balance.

Finally—does anybody believe that this flimsy structure under agriculture, of regimenting men, of putting fertile acres out of action, of giving American markets to foreigners, and levying its cost on the poor would not have fallen of its own weight, even without the Supreme Court.

Part V.

We may now explore some of the roads to relief.

And every country, including ourselves, has adopted measure after measure to protect the farmer and to speed a return to stability. Other nations tried most of the New Deal measures before the New Deal was born. From all this experience we should by now have learned some lessons in what is harmful, what is futile and what will help.

We shall be less than intelligent, and we shall be heartless of the farmers' problems, if we do not distill from this wreckage of these experiments some lessons in truth. And there have been aids to recovery extended to the farmer both at home and abroad which have been successful. The first group of these aids is: Increase consumption of food by restoration of employment. That can come only with a balanced budget, stable currency and credit. Give the farmer our own home market. Adopt such sane national policies as will again restore reasonable export markets. Out of this group of policies we can restore demand to many millions of fertile acres.

The second group of policies is to retire submarginal lands where people cannot make a living. Do it in the more effective and humane way proposed by Secretary Hyde in 1932. Retard new reclamation projects until the land can be used.

Third Policies Group.

A third group of policies is: Encourage cooperative marketing and those marketing agreements which contribute to prevent gluts in the flow to markets. The farm credit machinery established by Republican administrations and improved by the New Deal should be still further improved.

But beyond these measures this farm situation is now one where still further emergency measures pending general economic recovery are necessary. They are doubly necessary, as a new road must be built by which agriculture can get back onto solid ground from the quicksand of the New Deal. We shall need to open our minds to further experiment.

I suggest as one contribution to new methods that instead of trying to find a balance to agriculture by paying the farmer to curtail a crop, we should endeavor to expand another crop which can be marketed or which would improve the fertility of the soil.

We import vast quantities of vegetable oils, sugar and other commodities. There are industrial products that could be introduced by the American farmer. We need to replentish our soils with legumes and restore coverages. If we include this suggestion with the policies I have already mentioned, which would recover our lost acres from foreigners, we would be able to employ more than all the acres put out of action by the New Deal. We would reverse this economy of scarcity to an economy of plenty.

Lowden Move Cited.

This question of sustained fertility and better land use was brought to the forefront by former Gov. Lowden in 1920. Nation-wide conferences under Secretary Hyde in 1932 further developed parts of this subject. The matter was still further advanced by the Republican side in the campaign of that year. These ideas have been further contributed to by many thinking men since that time. In order to secure these objectives, I believe we must be prepared to subsidize directly such special crops until agriculture has again been brought into balance. At the end of such a road we could hope for a balanced agriculture in full production and increased fertility in our soils.

I am advised that it can be done within the spirit as well as the letter of the Constitution.

Since this paragraph was written these ideas have been discussed in Washington as a method of overcoming the debacle brought about by the New Deal. But if they are adopted it should be under certain fundamental safeguards. There should be no attempt to again impose New Deal ideas of controlling and regimenting the farmer or restricting production. He must be free of any restriction and control contracts. The farmer must be an entirely free man to use his own skill and judgment. The administration of these methods should be handled by the land grant colleges in order to free agriculture of politics and the vast bureaucracy now loaded upon the farmer. This work should be coordinated by a nonpolitical national board. The cost should be borne by the general taxpayer and not loaded upon the poorest of the country through some tax like the processing tax. Otherwise this method will again be a subterfuge of pinkish national planning under another alphabet.

Concerning Subsidy.

Somebody will shy at the blunt word "subsidy," and, in fact, the American people have been going all around Robin Hood's barn rather than use it. Over a century ago we began it in canals and turnpikes; since then we have kept it up in railroads, highways, ships and aviation, and silver mines and land reclamation—agriculture—we usually do it under some other name than subsidy. We had better begin to use straight words and we will act straight. A subsidy is a burden on the taxpayer, but it does not regiment or destroy the initiative or freedom of the receiver—it is to stimulate that.

In conclusion may I offer a word of personal emotion. It lies beyond the land of economics. I have spent years in public service in many countries during this most fateful period of human history. I saw as few men the backwash of war upon the common man of these countries. I saw at first hand revolution creeping in under promises of relief from the agonies of war destruction. I have seen the insidious destruction of liberty by propaganda. I have seen suffering humanity sacrifice that liberty, the greatest of all human achievements, for an illusion of security. The farmers of Russia supported the Bolsheviki against the new-born democracy on the promise of the land. Today they have the choice of Siberia or the collectivist farms. I have seen freedom, the most priceless heritage, torn from children that this generation might escape its reponsibilities. I wish to say to you unhesitatingly that our country has been following step by step the road through which these millions of people in foreign countries lost their liberties. Our farmers have had the blessing of individual liberty in greater fullness in their lives than any other part of even our own people. It was the farmers who fired the first shot at Lexington. It must be the farmers of America who defend that heritage. I ask you to stop, look, and listen.

Somersaults Of Mary Eller Delight Public

Maryland Club Gardens Fans Even Trying to Emulate Her.

By Chanticleer.

It's Mary Eller's moment at the Maryland Club Gardens this week. Miss Eller knows how to do more things with her slim young form than a very small boy could do with a chunk of modeling clay fashioned after the Eller lines.

Slides, splits, high kicks, spread eagles—those are kindergarten stuff. The Eller bag of tricks really gets under way with one of those slow-motion, reverse somersaults. One of those things that suddenly makes you recall that at 30 the young-man-about-town is a stuffy sort of person after all, with an assortment of stiff tendons and rickety joints.

There's something about a high kick or a well-executed split that appears easy—that is, with a little practice. But the reverse somersault! The effect on the patron is startling. You see the customers sneaking off to the end of the corridor or the entry way—for a little experimentation.

If you get what I mean—just try to bend over backward slowly until your hands touch the floor and your face is where your knees always are found. Only your knees are still there. And if you do get into that shape, try to get out of it without breaking something!

Also on the Garden's billing: Fran Trappe, whose skill on the accordion brings you to the realization that "Isle of Capri" isn't such an overworked tune after all. It's his favorite. But Trappe is a broad-minded artist—and this, coupled with a remarkable memory for old songs, guarantees an excellent performance of practically any tune you care to pull out of the hat of yesterday.

And Virginia Sims, who puts you in the right mood with one of those slow tempo tunes that works way down inside of you and pulls at a bass heart string, and then swings you in the very next number to "I'm Going to Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter." And just for good measure, Drummer Al Spieldwock of Jimmy Harris' band does a few things by way of improvement on the "truckin'" dance rage.

Speaking of drummers, Ralph Hawkins, Moe Baer's ace stick wielder at the Club Habana, has a unique accomplishment. He beats the time with his left foot, and double time with the right foot! Now that may be part of the groceries for every drummer, but it's another of those parlor tricks you might try for yourself. All you have to do is beat single time with one foot and double time with the other. C'mon, try it.

Our ear-to-the-ground department overheard persons at the Hi-Hat had a grand time other night when a beautiful blonde soprano, entirely unannounced, did one of the better interpretations of the current "Alone" and "Dinner for One." She was none other than the former Broadway favorite, Phyllis Montague, for several years under the Ziegfeld banner. Friends in her party prevailed on her, and Manager Frank McNey's permission was sought. It was Manager McNey who cried "Bravo!" more loudly than any other!

Test Predicted As Banks Pay Under Protest

18 New England Institutions Remit Insurance With Notation.

By the Associated Press.

A constitutional test of the Federal deposit insurance law was forecast yesterday when it became known some of the Nation's banks have paid their FDIC assessments "under protest."

It was reported authoritatively that 18 New England banks had attached to their January 15 payments the notation that the assessment was being met "under protest and with full rights reserved." Some Middle Western banks were said to have done likewise.

Officials of FDIC said they did not know officially that any bank intended to start a court battle, but had heard indirectly that some were contemplating such action.

New York Leads Fight.

One official reported four large New York banks had made their last payments under protest. He added it would be several days before he could say how many had protested the January 15 assessments.

Officials said they thought any banks contesting validity of the law would strike at its mandatory features, attacking the assessments on the ground they are made against total deposits of a bank instead of merely those insured.

Under the law, all national banks and State banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System are required to insure their deposits and pay the assessments.

State banks not members of the Reserve System are not required to participate, but 7,800 have voluntarily come under it. These banks, because of the voluntary action, one official said, could not attack the law.

Position "Insured."

Some of those paying assessments under protest were understood to have done so to be in a better position to recover their payments in the event the Supreme Court should at some time rule the insurance system unconstitutional.

Corporation officials said that the total amount of assessments annually from all banks ranges between $33,000,000 and $35,000,000.

They added, however, they were not concerned over possible court action, insisting Congress could quickly correct any flaws the Supreme Court might find.

For instance, they said, should a bank attack the law because the assessments are against total deposits, Congress could easily change the law to require 100 per cent insurance on all deposits. The bankers would want anything but that, they added.

Paul Walker, professor of economics at the University of Maryland, will be the principal speaker at the dinner meeting of the Rockville Chamber of Commerce tonight in the fire department building at Rockville, Md.

Walker, who has made a study of the tax problem in Maryland, will discuss the Maryland tax situation from a research standpoint, looking toward the working out of a reasonable plan for raising revenue, as a workable substitute for the present emergency gross receipts tax. State Senator Stedman Prescott and other prominent county officials are expected to attend.

Construction of the Kensington and Rockville grade crossings, which now have Maryland State Roads Commission money, is waiting for the approval of the plans by the United States Bureau of Public Roads.

It is expected that District Engineer Vernon M. Pierce, who is studying the plans, will have his report ready within two weeks. The grade crossing eliminations will cost about $400,000 and will be paid for from funds appropriated by the Public Works Administration for elimination of highway hazards in Maryland.

Both crossings have many fatal accidents in their history, the Rockville crossing having been the scene of the Williamsport High School bus crash in which 14 children were killed.

Immediate construction of the proposed junior high school building at Kensington was urged in communications received by the county board of education from the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department and the Woman's Community Club of Kensington. Funds are not available at present, however, the board said.

The board was asked to urge rigid parking regulations for the Bethesda Elementary School and improvement of the grounds surrounding the Montgomery Blair High School at Silver Spring. The parent-teacher associations of those schools put forward the appeals.

Plans for contractors planning to bid on the county school building program will be released as follows: Montgomery Blair High School gymnasium-auditorium unit, January 20; East Silver Spring auditorium, February 1; new junior high at Montgomery Hills, February 8; Bethesda-Chevy Chase High gymnasium and classroom unit, February 15; Sandy Spring gymnasium-auditorium, February 20.

Mrs. J. R. Ertter, of Rockville, was installed as president of the American Legion Auxiliary of the Henderson-Smith-Edmonds Post 86, at Rockville, Md., last night. Other officers installed were Miss Lucy Smith, vice president; Mrs. J. D. Louthan, secretary; Mrs. A. G. Watkins, treasurer; Mrs. Edwin Smith, chaplain, and Mrs. Louis Ryan, sergeant at arms.

Mrs. Frank P. Farley, president of the American Legion Auxiliary of the State of Maryland was the installing officer. As a part of its Americanism program the auxiliary presented a flag to the junior high school section of the Richard Montgomery High School at Rockville as a part of a special program arranged by the Citizenship Society. Mrs. Ertter made the presentation.

Proposed plans of the new physical education unit of the Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring, Md., were explained to the Parent-Teacher Association at the January meeting by George W. Davis, chairman of the Board of Education. Plans for the building, which will be a two-story structure connecting with the present unit, show that many new theories in physical education and health activities have been included. Construction is expected to start about April 1.

Among the innovations will be two solariums, one for girls and the other for boys, on which vita-ray glass will be used so that the children can get the full effect of the sun's rays. These rooms, Davis said, will be used to a large extent for children suffering from any ailment. The plans also include fully equipped examination rooms for the use of physicians, oculists and dentists.

The building will also contain a large gymnasium, a community room which can be used as a meeting room for organizations or groups, physical education laboratories for both the boys' and girls' departments and private offices for the physical directors. Adjoining the gymnasium and on the outside of the building will be two large courts inclosed with high brick walls, which can be used in cold weather for playing games.

A committee on bus-transportation problems was appointed to confer with similar groups in local schools. It was announced that the school had been given a rating as an accredited school for the next three years by the Middle States and Maryland Rating Association. A musical program was given by Justin Lawrie.

The annual father and son banquet of the Future Farmers of America at Poolesville High School was held last night. Among the speakers were Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of schools; Thomas C. Darby, president of the county board of Education, and Dr. H. J. Cotterman, State superintendent of vocational agriculture and an instructor at the University of Maryland.

The senior home arts class of Poolesville High School has been adjudged winner of the $25 first prize in the canning-a-balanced-meal contest of the Hazel Atlas Jar Co. Members of the class are Miss Vergie Pangle, Miss Nettie Lee Holland and Miss Julia Williams, with Mrs. D. Delmas Gaples as instructor.

P.-T. A. Studies McLean School Enrollment Aid

Lack of Funds Blamed for Failure to Offer Additional Courses.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The executive committee of the McLean Parent-Teacher Association yesterday considered the future of the high school at McLean. The association is endeavoring to ascertain the sentiment of the community in regard to the maintenance of the four-year high school course at the school.

According to school enrollment figures, the attendance of the McLean High School has gradually decreased for several years. This is attributed to the fact that most of the residents of that section of Fairfax County are Government employes and take their children to the Washington high schools, where better educational facilities are available. Because of the small enrollment at the school and inadequate funds the school board of Fairfax County has been unable to offer additional courses in the McLean school.

The McLean Parent-Teacher Association has pointed out that there are several solutions to the problem if the people of the community desire to maintain a four-year high school course and obtain an expanded curriculum and additional teachers and equipment. To do this the people must work for an increased high school enrollment and keep local children in the local schools, which would justify a demand for additional facilities. Another solution would be to consolidate the third and fourth years of high school with some other county high school and continuing the first and second years at McLean with the same teaching staff, but an expanded course of study.

The committee on public affairs composed of Mrs. Ralph Powell, chairman; Mrs. Henry Shonerd, Mrs. Lewis Domeratzky and Mrs. Henry Huschke were instructed to draft plans to be presented at the regular meeting of the association Tuesday afternoon.

The Vienna Development Corporation has reorganized and elected J. L. Miller as president; R. R. Allen, vice president; J. W. Pobst, secretary-treasurer. Other directors elected are Charles E. Roller, G. A. Hall, John T. Clatterbuck and Clinton P. Jones.

Bready, Mrs. E. B. Hutchison and Mrs. Lewis Ferguson. Program committee, Mrs. Maude Yount, chairman; Mrs. F. W. Robinson, Mrs. J. L. Nachman and Mrs. Calvin Kidwell. It was voted to have a supper on January 31 in the dining room of the Congregational Church. The Herndon 4-H Club girls will assist in preparing the supper. Proceeds will be used for the erection of a gate at the entrance of the Chestnut Grove Cemetery.

The Fairfax local of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association voiced opposition to the inequitable distribution of directors between the two States at a meeting Wednesday night in Fairfax Courthouse.

It was shown that the producers of Maryland and West Virginia combined produce about 8,500,000 gallons of milk annually, have 11 members on the board of directors of the association, while Virginia with an annual production of about 12,000,000 gallons of milk has only 10 directors.

Unless something is done immediately to strengthen the association members of the local branch declared that the body will shortly go to pieces. Former United States Senator Joseph L. Bristow told the Fairfax local that competition must be met without attempting to resort to a price war and it was suggested that the association be made so attractive that all producers of milk will desire to affiliate with it.

Senator Bristow was elected as a director for the Fairfax local to the board of directors of the association which will hold its annual meeting at Silver Spring, Md., on February 3.

The Class of '98 knows—the Class of '28 is learning—

—why Four Roses is in a class by itself

EVERY TIME you buy whiskey, you must choose between straight whiskey that's unblended; whiskey blended with neutral spirits; or a blend of straight whiskies and nothing but straight whiskies.

We here at Frankfort have been making fine American whiskey for 70 years—through four generations of the same family. During that time, we've learned quite a lot about what makes one kind of whiskey better than another. And out of all that experience has come the firm conviction that the best whiskey of all is a blend of the finest American straight whiskies.

That's why Four Roses, the pride of our house, bears this designation. That's why we believe it's the finest, richest-flavored whiskey we or anyone else has ever made.

After all, it stands to reason it should be. Every straight whiskey we distill has its own particular characteristic—something extra in the way of flavor, or bouquet or body. When we blend these whiskies—with the skill the years have taught us—we bring out the best qualities of each separate whiskey. We combine in one grand liquor every virtue a whiskey-lover seeks.

A lot of old-timers know this already. And the younger men are learning it mighty fast . . . that the best whiskey is a blend of all straight, all American whiskies—and its name is Four Roses!

Four Roses — IT'S A PERFECT BLEND — OF ALL STRAIGHT — ALL AMERICAN WHISKIES

Frankfort Distilleries, Louisville & Baltimore, makers of Four Roses, Paul Jones, Old Oscar Pepper, Mattingly & Moore—all blends of straight whiskies.

Re-Trial Denied Edith Maxwell; Appeal Planned

Counsel for Mountain Girl Will Ask Higher Court to Review Case.

By Virginia Lee Warren.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Jan. 16.—A petition will be filed in the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals asking for a review of the conviction of Edith Maxwell, whose request for a new trial was overruled here today by Circuit Court Judge H. A. W. Skeen.

In denying the petition for a new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence, the court granted the defense 60 days in which to prepare its appeal to the State appellate court.

Although defense counsel had not banked heavily on the belief that their motion would be granted, they were optimistic that they now have sufficient grounds to warrant a review by the higher court and ultimate freedom for the girl.

"We know that the girl is innocent and we are convinced that the action of the circuit court will be reversed," said Charles Henry Smith, the attorney retained by The Post to defend the girl, and his associate, M. J. Fulton, of Richmond.

Through the tactics of Smith the defense counsel believe that Judge Skeen has made an error in procedure which will surely be overruled by the appeals court.

Judge Skeen today recalled the two physicians who testified for the Commonwealth and permitted them to amplify their testimony as to the actual cause of death, when a jury was not present.

Girl Bitterly Disappointed.

The 21-year-old school teacher, who allegedly killed her father in self-defense when he attacked her with a knife because she came home at midnight last July 21, was bitterly disappointed at the judge's ruling.

Judge Skeen had manifested keen interest in the arguments presented yesterday by Smith and had ordered the recall of the physicians. His action was interpreted by Edith and her counsel that there was some doubt in his mind that the slipper blows caused death.

In his cross-examination today of Drs. T. J. Tudor and Glenn T. Foust, Smith succeeded in developing a conflict between the State's physicians as to the actual cause of death.

"In your opinion what was the immediate cause of death?" Smith asked Dr. Foust.

"The death was caused by the blood clot in a vein in the top of the head."

To the same question, Dr. Tudor replied that this blood clot alone would not have caused death, and admitted that the man's physical condition might have been the cause of his death.

Defense counsel had hoped that perhaps the judge might have ordered a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence assembled by Smith.

New Affidavits Submitted.

This evidence consisted of affidavits of District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who, after a study of the autopsy report, concluded that Trigg Maxwell's death was not caused by the blows and the supporting affidavits of Coroner J. M. Whitfield, of Richmond, and Acting Chief Medical Examiner Thomas C. Gonzales, of New York City.

"The evidence bearing on this question of newly discovered evidence," said Judge Skeen in his opinion, "does not warrant me in setting aside the verdict and granting a new trial.

"Therefore, the judgment of the court will be carried out according to the verdict of the jury."

During his interrogation by Commonwealth's Attorney Fred Greer, Dr. Foust said there were three clots on the brain. One was at the base of the brain, the other at the top of the head and another at the root of the nose.

"How many autopsies have you performed?" asked Smith.

"Not many," was the reply.

The purpose of the question was to contrast the opinion of Dr. Foust with that of Dr. MacDonald, who has performed more than 7,000 autopsies in the last 15 years.

In his testimony, Dr. Tudor said he believed the clots at the base of the brain and that near the nose might have been caused by the failure of the embalmer to thoroughly cleanse the veins.

In this respect he agreed with the findings of the three medical examiners who unanimously concluded that these clots were formed after death.

"We were not satisfied that the clot at the top of the head caused death," said Dr. Tudor, "so we looked for a fracture at the base of the brain."

"And when you failed to find the fracture," asked Smith, "you immediately concluded that the blood clot caused the death?"

"But that wound on the top of the skull was insufficient to cause death by itself?"

"It was insufficient."

When Dr. Tudor expressed this doubt, Smith concluded his examination, feeling that this uncertainty was sufficient to cause a reversal in the upper court.

The law requires, Smith said, that the Commonwealth prove with certainty that the blows inflicted by the defendant be the actual cause of death.

Dr. Tudor had previously admitted that they did not make any autopsy of the heart or other vital organs. The defense theory is that Maxwell did not die from the slipper blows, but from natural cause induced by his heavy drinking and his ungovernable temper, while drinking.

"If I should tell you that Dr. Foust testified that the clot on the top of the head would have caused death, would you say he was wrong?" Smith asked Tudor.

"Yes, I would," replied Tudor.

"Then you disagree with him on that point?"

"Yes."

Edith remained composed for a few minutes after the judge gave his opinion, but when she saw her mother weeping, she, too, started to cry.

Her two younger sisters, Mary Catherine and Ann Ruth, and her brother, Earl, also were in court when the decision was announced.

"If I could only change places and go into that jail instead of you, I would gladly do it," the mother said.

With $2 received yesterday from an anonymous contributor, the fund being raised for Edith Maxwell's defense reached $820.18.

Prince Georges Given $10,758 In Aid Money

Nice Notifies Delegation of County of Fund From Tax.

Members of the Prince Georges County delegation in the Maryland Legislature yesterday were advised by Gov. Nice that $10,758 has been allocated for relief needs in the county for February and part of March.

The Governor stated that he has authorized Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, to make a final grant to the counties and Baltimore City of all relief funds which can be taken legally from the gross receipts tax that expires March 31.

A special session of the Legislature will be called the first week in March, according to the Governor. It had previously been expected that the session would be called early in February. Gov. Nice said he would call the Legislature in March "upon advice from many members of the Legislature."

Gov. Nice stated "he had decided to budget all State funds at this time so that the counties and Baltimore City may have about seven weeks' notice to take such steps as they may deem necessary to finance their relief needs until the Legislature has acted. Pending a session of the Legislature, the counties and Baltimore City can, if they so desire, borrow for emergency purposes. The State cannot. And this the counties and Baltimore City should do if the occasion requires it."

A move to incorporate the section comprising Berwyn, Branchville and nearby sections has been launched by the Berwyn District Civic Association, which has indorsed the project "in principle."

T. Raymond Butch, president of the association, has appointed a committee composed of A. J. Thomas, W. F. Mulligan and L. W. Boughton to draft a charter of incorporation for submission to a mass meeting of citizens to be held next week.

If approved by the mass meeting, the special session of the State Legislature, to be held in March will be asked to authorize a referendum vote of the residents on the project.

Plans for early completion of the Lanham-Severn road will be laid before the boards of commissioners of Prince Georges and Anne Arundel counties. It was decided at a meeting in Bowie Tuesday night of the executive committee of the Lanham-Severn Road Association.

A conference will be held with the Prince Georges County Board next Tuesday by R. Lee Van Horn, E. E. Perkins and Noah Joffe. The Anne Arundel County Commissioners will be interviewed at an early date by Frank T. Gale, of Patuxent.

The committee decided to call a public mass meeting shortly in the Odd Fellows' Temple at Bowie, according to J. J. T. Graham, chairman of the group, who presided.

Construction of the thoroughfare, which has been completed except for a 4-mile stretch between Bowie and Patuxent, will provide a new direct route between Washington and Baltimore.

Installation of stop-signs at dangerous intersections in Bowie has been completed by the town commissioners.

Officials stated that no arrests would be made for a few days until motorists had time to become accustomed to the new signs. It was pointed out that greater travel on the Lanham-Severn road, open as far as Bowie, had created several dangerous intersections in the town.

Resignation of H. C. Byrd, acting president of the University of Maryland, as vice president of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier, was accepted by the board of directors at their annual meeting.

Byrd's action followed his announcement recently that he would give up all activities outside of his work at the university.

Directors re-elected were Joseph W. Aman, John H. Beall, Edgar H. Bondurant, Perry Boswell, George N. Bowen, Arthur Carr, Charles W. Clagett, T. Howard Duckett, Neuman G. Dudrow, Henry A. Friday, George B. Furman, Dr. W. Allen Griffith, Alexander Gude, Thaddeus M. Jones, J. Fred Keefauver, Arthur C. Keefer, Harry W. McNamee, Oliver Metzerott, S. Marvin Peach, Capt. Henry S. Roome, Benjamin R. Sherwood, Dr. Thomas B. Symons and Dr. Hillary T. Willis.

The directors re-elected T. Howard Duckett as president; Neuman G. Dudrow, vice president; Perry Boswell, vice president; Thaddeus M. Jones treasurer and trust officer; William Bowie, assistant treasurer, and J. Robert Sherwood, assistant treasurer.

A gain of nearly a half-million dollars in deposits was registered in 1935, according to reports submitted. Deposits now total about $4,000,000.

Negroes to Sue to Gain High School Admittance

Baltimore, Jan. 16 (AP).—Encouraged by the action of the State Court of Appeals in ruling that qualified Negroes must be admitted to the University of Maryland Law School, Baltimore County Negroes today renewed efforts to secure admission of Negro pupils to the Catonsville High School.

Thurgood Marshall, Negro attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, announced that he planned immediate court action. Last September the Catonsville High School was asked to receive two 13-year-old Negro girls as pupils. D. M. Zimmerman, the principal, refused to accept them as pupils.

Bank Seeks Title To 2,500 Acres

By the Associated Press.

Receivers for the Continental Trust Co. of this city asked the Supreme Court yesterday to grant it title to more than 2,500 acres in Virginia attached by courts in that State for the Loudoun National Bank of Leesburg, Va.

The Leesburg bank attached the land for unpaid balance on a $15,000 debt of the trust company.

John F. Moran, present receiver of the trust company, said Virginia State courts had held "title to land located in Virginia could only pass in conformity with the laws of Virginia."

This, Moran said, made the Virginia constitution (section 163) conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

The land is in Fauquier County.

Moran's petition said the section of the Virginia constitution under protest was:

"The property within this State of foreign corporations shall always be subject to attachment the same as that of resident individuals and nohing in this section shall restrict the power of the General Assembly to discriminate against foreign corporations whenever and in whatsoever respect it may deem expedient."

"How do I feel.... Rotten! why do you ask?"
"Because, you are not yourself!"
IT is all so simple, too! That tired, run-down, exhausted feeling quite often is due to lack of a sufficiency of those precious red-blood-cells. Just build up these oxygen-carrying cells and the whole body takes on new life... food is really turned into energy and strength... you can't help but feel and look better. S.S.S. Tonic restores deficient red-blood-cells... it also improves the appetite and digestion. It has been the nation's standby for over 100 years... and unless your case is exceptional it should help you, too. Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood-red cellophane-wrapped package. The big 20-oz. size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment... it's more economical.

Roosevelts Give Dinner For Diplomatic Chiefs

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at the most brilliant of state dinners last night in honor of the chiefs of mission and their wives, representing nearly every nation of the world in Washington. The Diplomatic Corps is always colorful and so the reception given in their honor and the dinner for the Ambassadors and Ministers are equally brilliant events. This year 14 Ambassadors, 31 Ministers, 6 Charges d'Affaires, a Cabinet officer, the chairman of the Committees on Foreign Relations of the two Houses of Congress with several other gueses made up the interesting list.

Several chiefs of mission attended the diplomatic dinner for the first time this season, having arrived in the Capital after last year's function had taken place. These included the envoys of Cuba, Mexico, Colombia, Greece, Siam, Egypt, Yugoslavia, Latvia, the Dominican Republic, Honduras and Costa Rica. Absent from the list were the retiring Minister of Iran, Ghaffar Khan Djalal, who though still in the Capital, has relinquished his duties as Minister, and with Mme. Last night the dinner table, laid with the exquisite plateaus, epergnes and vases of silver gilt, which President Monroe ordered from France, with china and glass of historic interest, was candle-lighted and decorated with red roses, white snapdragons, gardenias and maidenhair fern. The Marine Band played as the guests were assembling and the White House aids in full dress uniform added another note of ceremony to a colorful picture.

Streaked Hair Is Toned Down By Bluing Rinse

Old Favorite Is Called Upon to Soften Bleached and Hennaed Locks.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

BEAUTICIANS report a constant, growing demand for a good "toning-down" rinse and point with favor toward one that has been used for the last 50 years. In reality it's a sort of bluing. Lots of women think of it primarily as useful for removing yellow streaks from gray or white hair. It's excellent for this, too, but now that there are so many bleached and hennaed heads a new use has been found for it.

By using three or four drops in a half-pint of warm water as the final rinse, blonde hair that has taken on a brassy or streaked appearance due to continuous bleaching will be toned down and the hair given a softer appearance. For hair from which all color has been removed through bleaching, the bluing rinse gives the platinum blonde color.

Often brown or black hair that has had henna applied too frequently will take on a mahogany cast. This is toned down to a rich brown shade when ten drops of the bluing is used in a half-pint of warm water as a final rinse.

Of course, the tint is an old standby for removing the off-color streaks from gray or white hair. This type of hair is so sensitive that it is easily affected by too great heat, whether of steam or an iron. An acid condition in the system will also react on the hair in the form of yellow streaks. This cannot be removed in the ordinary shampoo, but when four to seven drops of this particular bluing are used in a half-pint of warm water as the final rinse it gives a pure, silvery white brilliance to hair which is otherwise dull and faded looking.

Dainty Guest Soaps.

About as big around as a 50-cent piece and as thick as a walnut are the tiny, dainty cakes of guest soap sold in a downtown store. They come neatly packed in rows of six in an attractive, oblong box. To make them an even better picture, they're of rainbow pastel shades.

The soaps have a light bouquet fragrance that makes them delightful to use. They are made with a cream base and therefore fine for dry, rough skins.

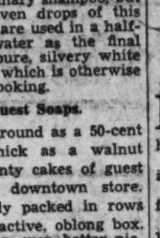
Recipe Portfolio.

One of the trickiest kitchen accessories we've seen for many a day is the recipe portfolio. With heavy glazed pasteboard sides, it opens out like an accordion. The sections in between are marked for soups, salads, sauces, dressings, meats, poultry, game, ice cream, cake, fish, oysters, eggs, omelets, deserts and miscellaneous.

On each portfolio there's a funny figure of a white-aproned chef pasted on the side. The portfolio comes in almost any shade you wish.

Smart Neckwear.

SOMETHING new and nifty in neckwear! You must see them, the delightful Frenchy looking pique collars and cuffs trimmed — believe it or not—in patent leather. And a washable leather at that!



Chic as chic can be are the Peter Pan collars and cuffs strikingly set off with a black and white patent leather flower. Equally attractive are the vestees with high necks and a peri little shiny black bow at the neckline. Then, of course, there are the regular lapels and cuffs with a black leather flower on one side.

Perennially good in a fashion way is black and white, favorite costumes of every season. Consequently, jaunty accessories to accompany black and white outfits are bound to receive a hearty welcome.

Jewelry Bargains.

The January clearance of costume jewelry in a large downtown store is enabling lots of us to pick up lovely necklaces, earrings, clips and brooches for just about half their usual cost. For instance, one whole counter is given over to jewelry marked down from $1 to 55 cents.

You'll find many unusual pieces here in colors and styles to match any frock in your wardrobe.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IN THIS stop and go day, it's no wonder nearly everybody likes maple. Nothing is so restful, so refreshing and unpretentious, and at the same time so sincerely charming. So we recommend it for the bedroom of a woman who doesn't have a lot to spend, yet wants something substantial and pleasant.

With her maple furniture we think yellow walls would be lovely with white glass curtains and draperies of brown and white checked gingham to match, one brown chair with white welting, and one yellow chair with brown welting. We should have all the lamps with milk glass bases and white shades. Then a rug in a light, cool shade of blue. Or she might have the room all in white, with details in red—white walls, red ball fringe for white curtains and spreads, white lamps with red finish and red chair coverings with white welting. And here a rug in a soft dusty green.

Scant Success of Women In Politics Irks Mrs. Cutler

Bachrach.

Mrs. Leslie Cutler, woman selectman from Needham, Mass., complains that women show too little initiative in politics. Women, she says, are primarily interested in the safety of the home, which Mrs. Cutler believes, is largely dependent on the character of the Government. Therefore, she asks, why don't women do something about it?

Massachusetts Politician Bitterly Deplores Lack of Interest and Inactivity of Sex; Fireside Complex Cited as Reason for Non-Participation.

By Dudley Harmon.

BANGING HER FIST on the desk so emphatically that the inkbottle rattled merrily, Mrs. Leslie Cutler, Massachusetts politician in Washington recently, talked long and bitterly the other day about how little women have accomplished in politics.

Mrs. Cutler came to town to have a long talk with Senator Borah about the latter's presidential campaign in Massachusetts.

Whacking the desk in vitriolic fashion, Mrs. Cutler began:

"With five or six exceptions, women have failed to take advantage of the political powers they acquired when they got the vote. If they do go into politics, after working their heads off they're satisfied with some such measly reward as the position of vice chairman on a committee. In this capacity they are nothing more than rubber stamps for the men."

Home and Club Minded.

The main reason women are not more active in politics, Mrs. Cutler believes, is because they are too home and club minded.

"They should get away from the fireside complex," she said gloomily. "If women will budget their time correctly, they'll find that household duties and care of their children will still leave them time for outside activities.

"Although a background of knowledge is important, experience is what counts most in politics. Instead of spending endless time mulling over heavy tomes, women should go out after the most humble political job as a beginning, even if it's only ringing doorbells to get votes. In this way they learn lessons and acquire an interest in politics never to be found in books alone."

Has Practical Experience.

Mrs. Cutler herself has had a good deal of the practical experience of which she speaks. She started her career in her home town of Needham, where she was chairman of the board of selectmen. Since New England towns are governed entirely by selectmen, Mrs. Cutler's position as chairman of the board amounted practically to that of mayor. In addition, Mrs. Cutler has twice been a candidate on the Republican ticket for representative in her State Legislature.

It's not ability in politics that women lack, but simply interest, according to Mrs. Cutler, who thinks that a woman would even make a good President.

"If someone would only arouse women's interest in politics sufficiently to organize them into a bloc," she sighed wistfully, "there's no limit to what they could do. Prejudice, precedent, in short, every obstacle, would give way in their path if they would only organize."

Three Essentials Listed.

Intelligence, ability in public speaking, and above all a desire to help other people, are the qualities Mrs. Cutler thinks most necessary to a woman in politics.

No one could ever accuse Mrs. Cutler of not budgeting her time correctly. She has five children, but nevertheless manages to combine home and political activities so that neither is slighted. Even her trip to Washington was not made exclusively for the purpose of seeing Senator Borah. Her children, two of whom accompanied her here, wanted to see the Capital.

However, Senator Borah must have cheered Mrs. Cutler up a bit in regard to women in politics, for she quotes him as speaking the following encouraging words:

"If the women of each State are organized by someone outstanding, they can be enormously helpful to me in my next campaign."

Parents Urged To Set Example To Halt Slang

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"WE HAD a swell time." "The picture was swell." "That'll be swell." "He played a swell game."

This is a cross-section of Tommy's daily speech. At 10 years old thiers is apparently only one adjective to express superlative excellence. It happens to be an adjective peculiarly objectionable to his parents, and even more so to his grandparents. The result is a constant refrain of reproof from them.

"How often have I told you not to say 'swell,' Tommy?"

"That is a most objectionable word, my son. Gentlemen don't use it."

Language Changes.

A generation ago when sweaters first took the place of the more elegant "jerseys" which the nineties wore, the grandparents of today objected to the use of a word implying "sweat." Who today remembers the objections? Language changes like custom, and the slang of one period frequently becomes the speech of another.

There is no use trying to stop the use of slang because it is slang. Children use it because their friends do, and their friends use it because their vocabularies are limited and slang fills the gaps. Then, in turn, the slang limits their vocabularies, for, having found a substitute for many words they work it to death.

Limits Vocabulary.

That is the real objection to slang—it limits one's vocabulary, and impoverishes the language. Furthermore, the constant use of the same word or phrase make speech monotonous and uninteresting. It is along some practical lines of this kind that one may object to its too frequent use.

If Tommy's parents, instead of nagging would one day give a short imitation of his speech, and then suggest to him a few variants in the adjective line, he probably would see the force of their complaints.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a young girl, 21 years of age, and have been living here in Washington for the past five months. During this time I have become acquainted with a young man about 23 years of age. I am now deeply in love with him. When he is with me his actions show that he, too, cares a great deal for me. However, he doesn't make an effort to see me often. It is now several weeks since he has telephoned me. I'm sure he still cares for me.

I am very desirous of keeping his friendship. Would it be proper for me to call him? How else can I get in touch with him? I am very anxious to see a great deal of him. Any help you can give me will be greatly appreciated.
Thank you. YEARNING.

What to Do.

DEAR YEARNING: I believe you are deceiving yourself in supposing the young man returns your love. If he did, he wouldn't avoid your society for weeks at a time. He probably knows you have taken his attentions too seriously and is hoping time and his absence will help you recover your senses; that is, if he's thinking of you at all.

There is no rule of etiquette prohibiting a girl's telephoning a man friend if she has legitimate reason for doing so. There seems little excuse in this case, however. If this man once gets the idea you are pursuing him, or thinks you are acting on the theory that you have a claim on his society, he may break off entirely what friendship exists at present.

* * * *

The most you can do to promote your cause is to create plausible pretexts for crossing his path. If you know where he lunches, you might lunch there occasionaly with friends, looking your sweetest and prettiest. You might cultivate friends of his whom you have met, men and girls. There is, of course, that time-worn ruse of woman—calling upon the man of her romantic choice for authoritative advice on matters of business, finance, ethics, or what-have-you. If you were about to buy a car, say, or choose a course of reading, or do any one of a dozen things in which you might reasonably be supposed to need the advice of an older and wiser head, you might appeal to him as a trusted friend to help you make the right decision.

* * * *

Does he ride, swim, skate, hike, play tennis or golf? If so, then you might profitably busy yourself with developing some skill along the same line. Similar enthusiasm for the same activities would naturally increase your opportunities for seeing him without seeming to seek him out. Unless you can tactfully effect some merger of your social background and leisure-time activities, I believe you may as well forget the young man, or leave the outcome of the yearned-for romance on the lap of the gods.

* * * *

Don't make the mistake of sitting home eating your heart out waiting for the telephone to ring. And don't leap at the chance to see him when he calls you after weeks of silence. Tell him it would be impossible to see him today or tonight or the next night. Say your only free night for the week is next Tuesday. If that doesn't fit in with his plans, be so-o-o sorry, but firm. Potentially you may interest him; but also, you may bore him a trifle by having no social initiative. Men seem to like best the sort of girls who are busy every waking minute of the day and evening with assorted social projects. M. H.

Print Frock Is Popular and Pretty

DELIGHTFUL PRELUDES of spring are the gay print frocks now appearing on all sides. No wonder they're so popular! They're colorful, flattering and a pleasing relief from winter's strictly formal finery. Take, for instance, the frock shown here. It's a black-smooth crepe highlighted with gold and orange flowers and bands of burnt orange velvet ribbons. It's a simple dress, but reeking with style. Particularly chic are the dressmaker touches—the pleated band around the top and bottom. You may buy this dress in a downtown store for the sum of $16.95. For further details call Frances Mangum, Post Fashion Editor (NAtional 4200).

Women Hear Plea for Study In Citizenship

Federation Board Backs Disney Bill for Civil Service Academy.

DECLARING THAT "organized clubwomen should assert themselves so that our Government will be preserved," Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, education chairman, yesterday outlined her program for training in citizenship at a board meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Representative Wesley E. Disney, of Oklahoma, explained his bill for a National Academy of Public Affairs and pictured such a school as taking a position in the civil service field like that of Annapolis and West Point in the Navy and Army. Bearing out Mrs. Whitehurst's idea that "we must bring trained intelligence to bear upon problems affecting our political, social and economic welfare," Dr. Walter Jaeger, director of the School of Graduate Research, Georgetown University, addressed the group on "Government Service as a Career."

Disney Bill Approved.

Shortly afterward, the board members voted approval of the principle and general purpose of Representative Disney's bill and passed a recommendation that members of the State federations be advised of it "with a view to bringing about informed action on it at conference at Miami, Fla., in April.

Another speaker at the morning session, Jay N. ("Ding") Darling, former chief of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, talked on conservation of natural resources, and invited board members to the North America Wildlife Conference to be held in Washington, February 3 to 7.

At the afternoon session Mrs. E. W. Shirk, of Redlands, Calif., expressed the hope that talking books for the blind will be made a three-year project for Junior Club women. She also called attention to the fact that there are 50,000 Junior Club women in the United States who are definitely assuming their place in the world and work of today.

Health Funds Urged.

Surg. Gen. Hugh S. Cumming, principal speaker at the evening session, urged board members to assist their State and local health officers in obtaining adequate State and local appropriations and "to develop a public demand for the appointment of only properly qualified individuals."

A discussion of "The American Merchant Marine," carried on between Col. John Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Kermit Roosevelt, vice president of the United States Lines, comprised the remainder of the evening program.

Outstanding persons scheduled to speak today include Mrs. William Brown Meloney and Mrs. William H. Purdy at the morning session; Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, Mrs. Herbert F. French, Mrs. Marie Schandine-Best and Mrs. Richard L. Cary, who will bring greetings to board members at the afternoon session, and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who will give the principal address at the dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, honoring the federation's clubs in foreign lands.

Hash Provides Needed Variety For Breakfast

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

LIFE IN AMERICA is what you make of it, in many senses of the word. The traditional daily three meals have changed in character along with other features since the horse and buggy days of American history.

The founding fathers built their days upon the substantial foundations of a breakfast that would seem a morning banquet to the average person of today.

Calories Unknown.

Orange juice, tomato juice, vitamins, calories, proteins, starches and carbohydrates were unknown. In blissful ignorance of modern food discoveries, the pioneer called "breakfast the best meal of the day" as, in many instances, it was the most substantial.

The type of breakfast, of course, varies with the location. In New England on Sunday and holidays it was the sacred bean that formed the principal dish, combined with generous slices of salt pork and the tasty brown bread of the section. In the South, a really gala breakfast included fried chicken with all the trimmings, and spoon bread. In keeping with the general English background a bit of sweet in the form of jam, gooseberry conserve or jelly was available on the bountiful sideboards.

"Standard" Breakfasts.

The Middle West flourished on hearty breakfasts, which were New England or Southern in type, according to the sectional strains behind these builders of America beyond the colonial frontiers.

Nowadays the average American breakfast begins with orange juice, the second course usually a cereal, dry or cooked, bacon and perhaps an egg or two.

Washington, generally speaking, is fond of corned beef hash as a breakfast dish.

A favorite Washington recipe is as follows:

Corned Beef Hash.

2 cups chopped corn beef
3 cups cold boiled chopped potatoes
Milk or cream
Salt and pepper.

Combine beef and potatoes. Season and moisten with milk or cream, put in a hot, buttered frying pan, stir until well mixed, spread evenly, then place over low heat, where it may brown slowly underneath (40 to 45 minutes). Use asbestos mat if cooked on gas stove. Turn and fold on a hot platter. Garnish with sprig of parsley in the middle. Chopped parsley, chopped green or red pepper or pimientos cut in small pieces may be added to hash mixture.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, is called by Robert Roseveare, headmaster of his old school, Oakington, to help solve the mystery of the death of Robert Marshall, younger brother of Wilbraham, head-prefect at the school and cousin of Mr. Ellington, his housemaster. The boy was found dead in bed, his skull apparently accidentally pierced by a gas light fixture that had fallen on him. Roseveare's suspicions were aroused when he found a note, written the night before the boy died, leaving all his belongings; "If anything should happen," to his brother Wilbraham, excepting a bicycle, which was to go to a friend, Jones Tertius. Revell meets Ellington and his young wife and Daggat, the school padre. Later in Daggat's rooms, he meets Lambourne.

CHAPTER V.

THE NEWCOMER made his way into the center of the room with a sort of nonchalant indifference. He was a youngish man, rather tall, perhaps in his early 30s, with dark eyes and hair and a curious half-melancholy carelessness in the way he nodded and smiled.

"We were talking," said Daggat, puffing away at a huge briar pipe, "about poor Marshall. Revell knew his brother—the one who was killed in the war."

Lambourne inclined his head but made no comment.

"I must say I feel dashed sorry for the present Marshall," Daggat continued. "He's here now, you know, Revell—our head-prefect. The only one left out of three brothers, and both the others killed. Frightful bad luck, you know, and his parents both dead, too. The poor fellow was pretty badly cut up, I can tell you. The Head wanted to give him leave for the rest of Term, but, of course, there was nowhere for him to go. His guardian's in India."

"How about his holidays, then?"

"I think he spends most of them with other fellows' people. He's very popular."

"Once he had a fortnight with Cousin Thomas," put in Lambourne. "Did you know, by the way, that Ellington was his cousin?"

"Yes, he's very popular," Daggat reiterated. "Jolly good at all games, but swimming especially. Quite the best swimmer Oakington ever had, I believe. Different in almost every way from his brother, poor chap."

DETECTIVE GUTHRIE, Of Scotland Yard.

Revell gathered somehow that Daggat had not greatly cared for the younger Marshall. "You knew him quite well, too, I suppose?" he queried.

"Oh, fairly well. He was in my junior form for English. Quiet sort of a fellow—imaginative, I daresay—reads queer kind of books. Not bad at his work. I expect he'd have taken his School Certificate."

Just then the chapel bell began to ring for morning service. "Must dash away," cried Daggat, picking up his gown. "You two chaps stay here and chinwag as long as you like."

When he had gone, Lambourne poked up the fire and dragged his chair nearer to it. "You're staying at the Head's, aren't you?" he remarked.

"Yes."

Lambourne went on after a pause, and with disconcerting abruptness: "Like the Head?"

"Pretty well, I think."

"I suppose you mean that you can't quite make him out?"

"No, I wouldn't say that I meant that." Revell was a little resentful of the other's interpretative air.

"You must remember he's been other things besides a schoolmaster. Lived abroad a good deal—America and the colonies. His degree's a medical one, by the way. Bit of a bon viveur, too; and the very devil for being discreet. All things to all men and to nearly all women, you know."

"He makes a good Head, though, I should think."

"Oh, first rate. Organizing ability and all that. Quite a war-time discovery, in fact."

"He was in the war, then?"

Shellshocked in War.

"Of it more than in it, though I'm not suggesting he didn't risk his life once or twice. Ran so many hospitals and things when he took it into his head to want to run Oakington, the governors snapped him up with joy."

Something in his tone provoked Revell to a question which, in normal circumstances, he would have been least likely to ask. "Were you in the war at all?"

"Oh, yes; decidedly. But I didn't organize anything. I just got gassed and shell shocked—that was all." He added, with a faint smile, "I don't quite know why I'm telling you all this—I don't gossip about my own affairs as a rule. Really, I suppose it's because Daggat put me in the mood—it always gets on my nerves to hear him explaining how Providence does this, and that, and the other in this best of all possible worlds. . . . By the way, to change the subject, are you the author of a novel?"

Revell, for whom this was rare and priceless flattery, admitted that that was so.

Adroit Getaway.

"I thought it must be you," Lambourne rejoined. "I think I read it when it came out. The usual sort of thing that people do write just after they leave Oxford. Still, rather better than most, I remember. Done anything since?"

Damned patronizing, Revell thought, yet more in disappointment than anger. And there was undoubtedly something in Lambourne that appealed to him. "Odd journalism," he replied, briefly.

They talked on for a few more minutes, but the slowly dying fire made Lambourne less and less happy. "Really," he said at length, rising from his chair, "I must go and do some work. I think I shall take a hot-water bottle to bed with me and mark exercise books until dinner time. Midday dinner, you know, on Sundays—cold meat and beetroot . . . Come along and have tea with me one afternoon, if you can spare the time. So long." It was the pleasantest, politest, and most effective way of saying: "Don't bother me any more just now;" and Revell, who himself specialized in such pleasant, polite and effective methods, appreciated the other's technique.

Oakington Depressing.

Revell found Oakington a rather depressing place as he wandered about the familiar corridors amidst silences unbroken save by the echo of his own footfalls.

Things were still pretty much the same, he reflected, despite Roseveare's uplighting influence. There were the same spluttering hot-water pipes in the corridors; there was the same curious smell of dust and ink in the deserted classrooms. Everywhere, too, there were new and rather ugly electric light fittings.

He next visited the two dormitories, in each of which he had slept as a schoolboy. It was rather melancholly, pacing along the felt matting in between the tiers of beds in the dormitories. In neither of them could Revell feel quite sure which bed he had once occupied—so lightly did sentimental recollections weigh on him. He found, indeed, that his thoughts were far more on the boy Marshall than on his school days. The bright, new electric lamp suspended from the ceiling over the central gangway drew his attention to the double row of scars on either side, where formerly had been the gas fittings. Certainly, as Daggat had said, it was a curious thing that one of them should have fallen directly on to a sleeping boy. And yet such curious things did happen. Perhaps the boys had been swinging on it previously, despite Roseveare's denial at the inquest. Heads could not know everything that happened.

During lunch, however, he did not mention the matter, nor did Roseveare. After a pleasant meal, punctuated with equally pleasant conversation, the weather improved and Revell, leaving the other in his study, strolled out into the world of leafless trees and sodden turf. There was really not much he could do. Still, he might as well fill in the time with some sort of inquiry. A chat with Jones Tertius, for instance, was an obvious step. The junior boys, he knew, usually spent winter Sunday afternoon in the common room. Revell found Jones there. But beyond the fact that Jones had known Marshall, Revell learned practically nothing.

Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt Bobs Hair to Save Time

New York, Jan. 5 (AP).—Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, whose long black hair, parted in the middle, gave her a madonna-like appearance, has had it bobbed and pertly curled on the sides. Her reason—"I'm now a working woman, and can't be bothered."

Mrs. Vanderbilt works six days a week in the dress shops she owns with two partners.

Varied Menus Are Suggested For Children

Carbohydrates and Protein Essential; They're Found in Many Foods.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Your Child's Food. Part II.

IN yesterday's article we discussed some of the specific food requirements of young children and made certain suggestions as to the importance of inculcating good food habits and the necessity for a balanced diet.

It is important to remember that a host of foods can supply the needed materials for growth, energy, and heat. It is not essential that every child have the same menu. Fruits and vegetables vary in different parts of the country and a combination suited to children in Florida or Louisiana may not be at hand in New England. Nevertheless, substitute groups equally efficient are obtainable rather generally throughout the country. We all require the same food elements but not from exactly the same sources.

Protein Needed.

The first consideration is that the daily energy demands of the body shall be taken care of. This means fuel foods and as previously noted, carbohydrates are easy to digest, to absorb, and to oxidize (use). Hence with little effort on the part of the body they will furnish heat and energy without producing ashes or clinkers which might clog the system. The waste products of carbohydrates are carbon dioxide and water, and both are eliminated readily.

For bone formation we must have calcium and phosphorus; and milk, cereals, and whole wheat bread or its equivalent should be given. If the child receives a generous amount of direct sunshine, well and good; if not, cod liver oil should be used. Iron is essential in the formation of the red coloring matter of the blood cells.

Let Thirst Be Guide.

Water drinking can be overdone and thirst is a fairly accurate guide. While the body needs plenty of fluid we must recall that many vegetables are 95 per cent water and that it is taken at every meal in many forms. The amount of supplementary drinking water should not be large.

We cannot separate good digestion from the proper chewing of food. A fair proportion of adult indigestion may be traced to the childhood habits of bolting food, eating too rapidly, or insufficient mastication. We should not soak the child's bread in milk. Rather let him chew on thin, oven baked toast for the sake of his teeth and his stomach.

Some years ago there was a great wave of enthusiasm for so-called roughage—which was designed to relieve constipation and provide something on which the bowel could contract. All green vegetables contain cellulose which is largely indigestible by the human animal. But the amount of roughage necessary for the child is relatively small. Obviously, it should be soft and nonirritating; only that which is contained in thoroughly cooked green vegetables and fruits.

On the Air Today

FEW comments from radio listeners have come to my attention in respect to the hubbub raised in the broadcasting industry by the withdrawal of certain music publishers (taking their copyrighted songs with them) from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Perhaps the "average listener" has noted a difference but if he has he is remaining singularly silent about it.

Kate Smith and her musical staff have checked the numbers now being used on the air, however, and have learned that of every five numbers sung or played, two are hits of former years.

Although I have not attempted to log the musical numbers used since the first of the year, I have observed the trend toward older songs since the copyright problem was dropped into the radio industry's lap 17 days ago. And I personally look on it as a blessing, something that might well have come voluntarily rather than by force of circumstances.

Now we have some such lovely thing as "I'll See You in My Dreams" sandwiched between "The Music Goes 'Round" and "Red Sails in the Sunset." As refreshing as a cool breeze on an insufferable summer night.

Although the publishers of "Lets Have Another Cup of Coffee" are not associated with the seceding Aacap group, the sponsors of "Show Boat" haven't arrived at a satisfactory agreement for the continued use of that number as a theme song. So—you'll hear "Down South," an old minstrel number, in the future for "Show Boat" identifications. Molasses and January, "Show Boat" comics, saw their signature "Runnin' Wild" go down with the copyright ship January 1. They're using "Tiger Rag" now.

George's Radio Co. has decided to experiment with personal appearances of stars at their main store, 816 F street northwest. The inauguration takes place tomorrow morning at 11, when the Mills Brothers appear for an hour's show. The idea: First the Mills Brothers sing, then their record of the same number is played. If you like the record, they'll autograph it for you.

Flash! The Joe Louis-Charley Retzlaff fisticuffs will be aired tonight at 11 o'clock by WMAL, direct from ringside. Inasmuch as Louis has been laying his victims away with dispatch, WMAL will appropriately hold its "Slumber Hour" ready for instant application.

Did you miss Andy on the Amos and Andy program last Tuesday night? Well, he wasn't there. Charles Correll (Andy) was in Peoria, helping Father Correll celebrate his seventieth birthday anniversary. Freeman Gosden (Amos) carried the entire script along, employing only those characters he usually portrays. It was another "first" for the team—this, the first time one ever has broadcast without the other.

Drive Opens To Rid D. C. Of Speeders

Even First Offenders Will Lose Permits for 15 Days.

Brown Orders Police to Show Violators No Mercy.

The convicted speeder—whether he be a first offender or habitual law-breaker—is the newest target in a determined effort to rid Washington streets of careless driving and wanton traffic slaughter.

Suggested ten days ago by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, a new rule providing for suspension of drivers' permits on first offense convictions for speeding became effective yesterday. The suspension can be for 15 days or longer—depending on the type of violation.

Coincident with this ruling came an announcement from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, ordering a drastic "clamp down" on traffic violations. He was bitter in his denunciation of the "wilfull" violator and instructed his command to show no mercy in enforcing regulations.

Violators to Be Arrested.

Renewing his support of The Post's "reason why of violations" series, Maj. Brown agreed that District drivers, through repeated warnings and courteous instructions by policemen, are familiar with regulations and are conscious of infractions.

"Wilful violations of traffic laws demand enforcement," said Maj. Brown. "Motorists should — and shall — be arrested when their disregard of the law is intentional and careless.

"Officers accompanying The Post crusing reporter have been instructed by me to strictly enforce regulations and make arrests where the occasion demands. There may be extenuating circumstances. In these cases, the officer will use his own judgement."

The first motorist to fall under yesterday's new suspension rule was Harry C. Bliss, 23, of the 600 block of Columbia road, northwest. He was convicted in Traffic Court of speeding 50 miles an hour on Fourteenth street northwest and was fined $25. It was his second offense, police reported.

Board to Meet Daily.

In addition to the fine, Bliss faces loss of his driver's permit by suspension. A record of his conviction was sent by Maj. Brown to the Board of Review and Revocation of Operators' Permits.

As a first offender, George Mackey, 27, a teacher of the 440 block of Volta place northwest, was No. 1 driver to be arrested after the new order became effective. He was charged with speeding 38 miles an hour on Resevoir road northwest. Authorities emphasized that no action in regard to suspension o his permit will be taken until the case has been acted upon in Traffic Court.

A number of other motorists also came under the new rule by convictions in court yesterday.

M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic and chairman of the Review and Revocation Board, announced that his board will meet daily to discuss speeding convictions. Heretofore, the board met but twice a month.

Suspension Schedule.

The suspension schedule is as follows:

First offense—speeding between 35 and 40 miles an hour, 15-day suspension; speeding between 40 and 50 miles an hour, 30-day suspension; speeding over 50 miles an hour, indefinite suspension.

Second offense within a year—30 to 40 miles an hour, 30-day suspension; 40 to 50 miles an hour, 45-day suspension.

Third offense within a year—suspension from three to six months.

While steps to enforce local regulations become more drastic, a Congressional subcommittee planned to start a comprehensive survey of Washington's increasing traffic problem.

Congressional Probe.

The subcommittee on streets and traffic of the House District Committee will make a series of personal inspection trips throughout the city. The first expedition is scheduled Tuesday. Members of the committee, headed by Representative Carpenter (Democrat), of Kansas, will observe traffic hazards and other conditions contributing to the mounting number of accidents, injuries and deaths.

Representative Carpenter was named to head the survey by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the sub-committee. Patman will be away from Washington for at least ten days. Before leaving, he announced:

"Traffic conditions in Washington are horrible. Automobiles are slaughtering people on the streets. Something must be done to stop it."

Carpenter indicated a series of hearings would be held to allow traffic experts to give their views on conditions and suggest possible remedies.

The Congressional traffic study was authorized by the full District Committee after Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, called attention to the 113 traffic deaths last year and 9 so far this year.

Drivers Know Law But Forget, Cruising Reporter Discovers

Written Answers to 25 Questions and Difficult Tests at Wheel Required of Applicants; Most Violators Admit Guilt.

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, is cruising in a police car. Motorists who violate the law are stopped. Their side of the story is recorded. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the seventh in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

As we opened the second week of our roving search for "the reason why" yesterday, we set out first to learn how well District motorists know traffic regulations when they apply for driving permits. And then we sought to learn how well these same regulations are remembered, when the motorist violates the law.

Delaying our daily cruise in a police car until afternoon, we spent the morning with Robert F. Cornett, chief examiner of the permit division, Traffic Department. We stood in his "school room" while dozens of permit applicants scratched their heads and mopped their brows over examination papers.

Until recently, the new driver was given an oral examination. Now, he must sit at a desk and answer 25 written questions. And he must answer all of them right the first time or "come back tomorrow."

Thorough Tests Given.

The questions are hard. (The answers are even harder, if the applicant hasn't studied.) Regulations governing issuance of permits are strict. Cornett supervises the "classroom." He watches to see that there is no "cribbing." And on top of all this, the applicant must take a stiff driving test. (Here is where most of them fall down.)

Cornett revealed that approximately 75 per cent of new drivers pass the written examination on the first try. The 25 per cent who fail do so for various reasons.

Failure to study regulations before taking the examination is responsible for the majority of "flunks," according to Cornett. Others say they have "spent hours" cramming for the test, but can't even answer the first question.

Evidence that every District motorist knows how and why innocent persons meet injury and death in traffic accidents is recorded in black and white (in the motorist's own handwriting) at the Traffic Department. Each applicant is asked this question:

"What are the three main causes of traffic fatalities and injuries?"

Here is what they answer: "Recklessness." "Mechanical defects in vehicles." "Lack of adequate knowledge of traffic regulations." "Willful disobedience of laws." "Unthinking drivers."

Thus does the applicant, who becomes a part of Washington's traffic problem, leave behind him a written record of what he knows. (Or what he doesn't know.)

Upward of 200 persons a day take examinations for permits. Among these are drivers who come here from other cities—who may know how to drive an automobile, but first must know District laws.

Many of us(probably you) often have been irked by a driver who "clamps down" on the horn button and refuses to let go. In digging through examination answers yesterday we found one of the "reasons why." One question reads: "what is the proper use of the automobile horn?" The correct answer is: "To be used as a warning."

But here are some of the replies as made: "To blow." "To scare pedestrians." "To make people move."

All Know Rules.

From what we could learn on our visit to Cornett's office the average motorist, when he obtains his driving permit, is fully familiar with all regulatons.

So, our next step was to find out how long the answers were remembered. Again, we started out on our cruising quest in a police radio car. Policeman J. R. Milsted and W. H. Carter, Traffic Division, rode with us.

Yesterday was the first effective day of a new order which suspends permits on first-offense speed violations. And the speeders apparently knew it. They watched their rear-view mirrors and kept close to the curb.

A motorcycle rider was the first to be questioned by Policeman Carter. We were preparing to make a right turn at Fifth and H streets northwest, when the motorcycle passed us on the right and swung around the corner. One of the permit examination questions is: "On which side of a moving vehicle should you pass." The answer is "left."

"I didn't know I couldn't pass you like that," said the motor rider. (Yet he forced us to swerve to avoid a collision.)

Admits His Fault.

Next, we cruised out Bladensberg road northeast. At New York avenue a driver slipped past a "caution" light. It had turned red before he crossed the intersection.

"It was my fault—I was in a hurry," was the driver's answer to Milsted's question of "Why?" Then the motorist said he didn't see the light until it was too late to stop. Traffic was not heavy and this infraction created no great hazard. "But it might the next time," he was told.

A varied assortment of minor infractions was observed during the balance of our ride. In nearly every case, the motorist admitted he knew he was wong—that he remembered his permit examination, but "just forgot for the moment."

Yesterday, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, ordered strict enforcement of regulations. This series of stories was planned to bring public attention to violations and the "reason why." Motorists were merely warned, so the lesson could be brought to others.

But the public demands arrests—and so does Maj. Brown.

Woman Struck by Auto.

Mrs. Orrell B. Chamberlin, 60, of 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, was critically injured last night. She was struck by an auto as she tried to cross the street in front of her home.

Mrs. Chamberlin was removed to Emergency Hospital, where she was treated for a possible fracture of the skull, internal injuries and a broken left knee.

Police said the car which struck her was operated by Rockey B. Sams, 35, colored, of the 1300 block of T street northwest. Sams was charged with reckless driving.

Bartholomew Barry, 72, of 53 K street northwest, sustained serious injuries, police said, when he was struck by a car operated by Ellsworth Reichert, 36, of Baltimore, at First and H streets northeast. Barry was treated at Casualty Hospital for serious shock and for laceration to the face and limbs.

At the conclusion of the elective session there was a reception for the newly elected officers and their wives by the Shrine members and their families. A dance followed.

Vivisection Prohibition Bill Hearing Scheduled

A sub-committee hearing on the Quinn bill to prohibit vivisection operations on dogs in Washington was scheduled yesterday by Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, for 10 o'clock Monday morning.

The measure carries a penalty of from $100 to $500 fine or from three months to a year's imprisonment of anyone who performs experiments on living dogs.

Medical Body May Ask Tax To Aid Health

Physicians' Group Holds Facilities Here Are Inadequate.

Better Agency Staffs Are Requested in Resolution.

Declaring that the current estimates for safeguarding public health in Washington are woefully inadequate, the Medical Society's committee on public health last night stated that the need was so keen that its members were "prepared, as taxpayers, to advocate increases in the local tax rate, if they be found necessary, to underwrite adequately the local health problem."

ThTe committee stated that other local civic groups could do no less than to agree to such increases if they are found to be necessary.

In stating that the citizens will demand that the "government of the District of Columbia must now shift the emphasis to health in local affairs," the committee declared that "the local medical profession, in conrtibuting its services to the medical care of the indigent and in public health seurveys and drives, is making an annual contribution in mitigation of the local taxtburden approximating more han $1,000,000."

The society further demanded that the "medical profession in furnishing so large a measure of service should not be required in addition to its donation of time to make 'bricks without straw,' but should be able to demand that the agencies should be properly equipped and staffed."

By unanimous vote the society passed a resolution directing its appropriate committees "to use every proper means to secure the passage of appropriations vital to the public health needs of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1937."

The public health committee's report and resolution were the result of an action taken January 8, when the Medical Society, becoming alarmed at the failure of the budget to made adequate provisions for health needs here, instructed the committee to investigate and report.

Truant Girl Returns; School Aid Is Blamed

Alva Carmen Thyrring is greeted by her happy mother.

She Traveled to South After Scolding by Officer.

Adventurous Alva Carmen Thyrring, 15-year-old school girl who ran away from home in October, came back to Washington yesterday "for good."

Her brown eyes flashed as she told of her experience last night after she was driven to her home at 417 Oglethorpe street northwest by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Viggo Thyrring.

Father, mother and daughter were reunited Sunday in Oliver, Ga., after Alva aroused the suspicion of friends in the Georgia town by "talking about Washington all the time."

Alva's mother, who weeks ago gave her daughter up for dead, listened approvingly as the girl related, with a note of pride in her voice, how she impressed truck drivers and others she met while hitch-hiking by displaying a pistol and a butcher knife.

She explained she left home because a truant officer scolded her when she quit attending Central High School and went to Paul Junior High School.

"She told mother I was spoiled," Alva Carmen protested. "She said I ought to have to make my own living, so I thought I'd go to Miami and show her I could get along all right by myself."

Alva Carmen cut her own hair short like a boy's before setting out for Florida October 25. She now is letting the blonde tresses grow out again.

When she departed she had $1 stuffed away in her jacket. She took along her mother's .32 pistol and a butcher knife from the kitchen. She wore riding pants and a blouse. She carried along a dress bundled up in a sweater.

"I thought it would be safer to ride in trucks," she said. "I didn't have any trouble getting rides.

"Every time I got in a truck I told the driver: 'If you want to give me a ride you can. If you want to get funny you can. I can take care of that too.' I always showed them my pistol and my knife.

"Only one truck driver refused to give me a ride. He said he wasn't allowed to ride with anybody who carried a pistol.

"Yes, I got a ride on a freight train once. It was down in North Carolina. When I showed my gun to the engineer he just laughed and said: 'O K, kid. You needn't worry. I've got grandchildren.' He took me through the caboose and everything. The train only went 5 miles or so, though."

Alva Carmen reached Savannah, Ga., two days after leaving Washington.

"Most of my dollar was gone—spent on food—when I got to Savannah, so I sold the pistol to a truck driver for $10."

She went to a hotel in Savannah and dined on turkey, steak and oyster stew. She went to Jacksonville, Fla., the next day and got a job in a few hours as cashier in a small dry goods store.

"Someone told me they were going to put everybody across the State line unless they had plenty of money so I went back to Savannah. I didn't ask for my pay because I had only worked a day."

She stayed in Savannah ten days. While there she had three jobs, two as companion to elderly women and a third in a hospital. One of the women for whom she worked there suggested she visit Mrs. Charles Pryor in Oliver.

"I went to the Pryors and stayed there until Mr. Pryor wrote to Washington policemen about me. I told them my name was Tony Kent. I told them my mother and father were killed in an automobile accident because I didn'a want to come home until next spring.

"No, I wasn't worried about my mother. I figured she was all right and I knew I was all right."

When Alva said she had "right much fun" on the trip, Mrs. Thyrring interposed:

"There you go, talking just like they do down in Georgia."

Someone asked whether she fell in love while away.

"Fall in love," the girl scoffed. "Good grief! Why should I?"

Alva said she would return to school February 1. Meanwhile, she intends to spend "all my time in the movies."

Mrs Thyrring emphasized she had forgiven the daughter for all the anxiety she caused her.

"I don't blame her," she said. "I've always had a desire to go traveling myself."

As the reporters left someone asked Alva when she intended to run away again.

"There won't be any next time," she promised.

Senate Sends Small Lenders Bill to House

House Sub-Committee Conducts Hearings on Loan Acts.

Upper Chamber Passes Measure for Boiler Inspection Division.

The Senate yesterday passed the District small loans bill that was successfully blocked last session by the late Senator Schall (Republican), of Minnesota, while a House sub-committee conducted hearings on new and old small loans legislation.

A second District bill, designed to create a boiler-inspection division of the District Engineer Department, also passed the Senate. The two measures were the first local legislation to be enacted by the Senate in the current session.

The small loans bill allows licnesed lenders to charge interest at the rtae of 2 per cent a month with additional small fees on loans under $35 for 30 days, on character loans, and on loans on collateral.

Amendment Planned.

Because this bill was opposed last session in both the House and the Senate the District Commissioners have sent up a supplementary bill aimed at amending the present inoperative law limiting interest rates to 1 per cent a month.

The House Judiciary sub-committee yesterday in a hearing on both bills heard Harry J. Donohue, president of the Washington Industrial Loan Co., testify that small loan companies with sufficient capital can operate at a profit on 1 per cent monthly interest.

District officials had previously declared that the low interest rate had driven licensed smal loan operators out of Washington.

3,000 Outstanding.

Donohue said his company has 3,000 loans outstanding for a total of $280,000.

Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, indorsed the 2 per cent measure, however.

Fprther hearings will be held by the sub-committee and consideration will be given to amendments proposed by Donohue.

The boiler-inspection bill is an outgrowth of the demand last year for an adequate smoke inspection act. It was at first a partof the smoke control bill submitted by the Dsitrict Commissioners, but subsequently the two proposals were embodied in separate bills.

Loew Publicists Advance as Work Produces Rich Results Here and in Baltimore

Carter Barron Announces Move At a Gay Revel

Brown, Ray Bell Advance; 'Julie' to Be Done Over; Amusement Chatter.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The boys step up.

Out of another of the gay revels for which Divisional Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., is so justly noted, there emerged on Wednesday evening in suite 236 of the Hotel Carlton the joint announcement by Mr. Barron and Oscar Doob, director of publicity, advertising and exploitation for Loew's, that Lou Brown, heretofore in charge of Loewcal publiicty, will be transferred to Baltimore, with headquarters in the Century Theater, presided over by City Manager Billy Saxton of the Monumental City, and Raymond Bell, no relation, his assistant for these many months now, will take over the Washington job.

I have a particular and slightly proud interest in this moving up of the lads who devote their ample talents to an activity which I once myself pursued. Mr. Brown, once a day city editor on this fine family journal, got a bit of a foothold as a publicist through a meager gesture on the part of this column.

With the Ray Bell career I have had no intimate contact, but if ever I could do the boy a favor, it would be looked upon as a privilege.

Always Room at Top.

When Carter Barron came to these moderately metropolitan precincts, some three or four years ago, he was not too prescient a theater man.

He has taken on tremendous stature as an executive since that time. His ability has grown with the constant expansion of his opportunity to display those qualities of leadership which he obviously possesses.

I hope Lou Brown and Ray Bell, in their respetcive capacities, may disclose similar traits of leadership that will conduct them to heights which they have not yet scaled.

There seem to be no remaining heights as a party-thrower of the first flight to which Mr. Barron can aspire.

Some of the rest of us might refrain from making innocuous observations to vacuous blondes, but in the large view, Mr. Barron's parties, even if remotely sponsored by Mr. Doob are the top.

And so, it might be added, are the vacuous blondes, whose vacuity seems to be a little in the nature of a complete, if not convincing, delusion!

One hears, in a round-about sort of way, that Mr. Alex Yokel, distinguished producer of stage hits and near-hits, practically is in consonance with the point of view of the local critical fraternity and deems his current play at the National, "Julie, the Great," not too hot. Since that is the apparent consensus of both Mr. Yokel and the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press, "Julie, the Great" will come off Saturday night for revamping of the script, recasting and whatnot. It all should do the piece quite a bit of good! Or didn't you read Wednesday morning's paper?

On The Horizon.

Mr. Yokel, however, is not discouraged, not has he lost confidence in the authorial integrity of one John Taintor Foote.

John Taintor Foote, celebrated short story writer, author of "Julie, the Great," has written another play that will be produced by Mr. Yokel, producer of "Julie, the Great" and "Three Men on a Horse," which had its world premiere at the National Theater almost exactly one year ago.

The name of the next Foote play is "Tomcat." This, too, is his dramatization of his own story, "The Play's the Thing." No production date has been determined so far, but it is expected to be brought in during the current season.

Other plays on Mr. Yokel's production schedule include "Button, Button," by McElbert Moore; "The Terrible Siren," by Emanie Sachs, and "The Magnificent Heel," by Samson Raphaelson. George Jessel has already signed a contract to be starred in the last named, which will be the next play Mr. Yokel will offer.

In the meantime, the fifth company of "Three Men on a Horse," is being assembled at the Playhouse, New York. It will sail for England at the end of this month.

Romaine Stevens has been added to the cast of "Benevolent Blackmail," to be presented in Wardman Park Theater, beginning February 4. This is good news.

A young actress of exceptional ability, Miss Stevens constitutes a valuable addition to the group who will enact Morgan Baker's new drama of governmental chicanery, to be executed in three acts and six scenes. Playing the part of the secretary to the Representative crusading against the shady practices of small-time politicians will be seen Ann Ives, another of the Capital's most brilliant semi-professional players.

Romaine Stevens will be remembered for exceptional work in Theodore Tiller's "A Trio of Triangles" and in the Pierce Hall production of Ibsen's "A Wild Duck."

Kids to Be Guests.

Four hundred and fifty children from Washington homes and orphanages will be guests of the Belasco at a special "early bird" matinee tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock, to see May Robson in "Three Kids and a Queen."

Children from the following orphanages and homes are expected to be present: Baptist Home for Children, Episcopal Home for Children, Hilcrest, a children's village; Jewish Foster Home, Masonic and Eastern Star Home, St. John's Orphanage, St. Joseph's Home and School, St. Vincent's Home and School and Swartzell Methodist Home.

"Three Kids and a Queen," which concerns three young boys who suddenly find themselves in the position of kidnapers of the richest woman in the world, is ideal entertainment for young ones and the Belasco's guests are sure to have an enjoyable time.

May Robson plays the rich old lady, with Frankie Darro, Billy Burrud and William Benedict appearing as three youthful kidnapers. The supporting cast features such popular players as Henry Armetta, Charlotte Henry, John Miljan, Herman Bing, Hedda Hopper and many others.

Following the "early bird" matinee, the Belasco will continue its regular program for "Three Kids and a Queen."

The Studio of Theater Arts will amuse itself and a number of invited guests tonight with the presentation of three one-act plays.

The first is a tabloid version of "Little Women," arranged by Mildred Allen Butler, director of the Little Theater League, of Richmond. It will be directed by Constance Connor Brown, head of the studio, and in the cast will be Barbara Schmitt, Vivian Yeager, Marjorie Rosenthal, Verna Gusack and Patsy Goldsmith, all members of the junior class of the studio.

The second play, "Alexander's Horse," has Betty Rice, Jean McClellan and James Kelley in the cast and is directed by Miss McClellan.

"Wrong Numbers," which completes the program, will be played by Sallie Hinman, Ethel Gottlieb and Elmer Evans and directed by Margery Rice.

The program will be presented at the studio.

Old-Timer Calls.

So who should drop into the office in an off moment but Joe Williams, brother of the erstwhile producer, John Williams, and of that gorgeous decoration of musical comedy, Hattie Williams.

Joe is in town in the interests of Cornelia Otis Skinner and her admirable character studies which will be the attraction at the National the week of January 27.

Mr. Williams, like your present commentator, goes back a few years in the workings of the playhouse. Something of his reminiscence, I am afraid, may creep into Sunday's lead on the theater page.

Don't say I didn't warn you!

First-Aid Note.

In case you want to know what I am doing for my cold, the answer is comparatively simple.

Sneezing!

Is as Dangerous as Title Implies!

There can be no discounting the ominous quality of this beguiling smile disclosed by Margaret Lindsay, cast in an important supporting role with Bette Davis and Franchot Tone in "Dangerous," opening today on the screen at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. Miss Lindsay, it will be recalled, is the young woman who graduated from the National Park Seminary, at Forest Glen, Md., and then went abroad to gain her first reputation as a "British" actress—which she is not at all.

The five months' vigil of Admiral Byrd, interesting features of the dash, and illustrations of observations will be shown in films. Life at the base of the expedition also will be described and shown on the screen.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra presents first students' concert in Central High School Thursday afternoon; Hans Kindler, conductor and expositor. Program: First movement of B minor Symphony (Schubert), excerpts from "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" (Mozart), and compositions by Bach, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Chaikovski and Wagner.

One observes with gratification the increase, from season to season, of the interest which the rising generation of potential music-lovers is taking in the students' concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra. Yesterday's audience was larger than assemblages three years ago, when only one series of these concerts was given for all the young people of the city; and reports are yet to come from Eastern High School, where the same program will be presented this afternoon, and from Western High School next Monday.

No happier omen for the future of the orchestra, and for the mounting level of musical appreciation in the community, can be found than the sight of these attentive listeners making their acquaintance with orchestral procedure, learning from Hans Kindler what to listen for, and absorbing good music at a salubrious source. These lessons in hearing intelligently are orthodox in their pedagogy, for they not only now enrich the receivers, but they will in time enrich the general life by diffusion.

Informal, genial and whimsical as is his wont when he faces youthful auditors, Dr. Kindler incited laughter yesterday while he imparted information in his comments on the compositions performed. The music had been selected to illustrate the two primary elements of rhythm and melody. Yet the program covered much territory, extending from the "Marche Militaire" of Schubert, to the Wagnerian pomp of the "Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla."

Piano recital by Egon Petri in the Shoreham Hotel Thursday afternoon. Program: Italian Concerto (Bach), Sonata in B minor (Liszt), Three Intermezzi, Op. 117 (Brahms), 24 Preludes (Chopin).

It seems only the other day, although it was actually a year ago this month, that I was writing about Egon Petri's recital in the National Theater, and such is the illusion of compressed time that I find very little to say that was not said then. There is no particular point in stressing again his technical mastery, which is taken for granted. If there is any secret of dynamics that he does not know, it must be unimportant, and his clarity of exposition is as notable as ever.

The fault is probably my own, that I did not enjoy yesterday's recital as much as the previous one. The condition of perfect receptivity cannot be summoned at will; it is an evasive thing that comes and goes as it pleases. On this occasion it seemed to me that the piano was too brilliantly voiced for the room; that the player was using too much open pedal, and that the fortissimo passages were unduly strenuous.

But Mr. Petri may have requested that precise voicing of the instrument; his pedaling might have been precise to a stroke, and the thundrous tones exactly what he wanted. My mood did not happen to coincide with his throughout the program. There were certainly moments, such as came during his sympathetic and subtle readings of the Brahms intermezzi and the more delicate preludes of Chopin, when our accord could not have been closer.

Mr. Petri built his program, I understand, to meet the wishes of the majority of those assembled to hear it. A faint alarm stirs within me at the thought that this practice might become habitual in our concert halls. Its inadvisability, from the viewpoint of one interested in the extension of musical knowledge, is obvious, because the requests, in nine cases out of ten, are for familiar compositions.

On the other hand, I admit that I would like to have the critics consulted about what they would like to hear. The possibilities, in the case of an artist of Mr. Petri's ability and knowledge, are exciting. Had I been asked, I would have suggested for this program Busoni's "Elegien" and his variations of Chopin's C minor prelude, the F major sonata of Sibelius, Liszt's "Valses Oubliees," Medtner's "Sonata-Ballade," and a group of Alkan's etudes.

Change Urged In Football Scoring

Eastern Grid Officials Urge Drastic Revision of Regulations.

Would Abolish Point After Touchdown; Add Period in Tie Games.

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Detailed proposals for changes in the football rules, including abolishment of the point after touchdown, substitution of a scoring system allowing 1 point for each first down and an overtime period to break ties, were put forward today on behalf of the Eastern Association of Football Officials.

The suggestions, embracing wide range and the carefully considered views of gridiron arbiters, have been forwared to Walter R. Okeson, of Lehigh, chairman of the national collegiate rules committee, by William R. Crowley, of New York, who has served as president of the assotion for the past three years.

Listing a dozen proposals, mainly of a clarifying or technical nature, Crowley also urged the return of the goal posts to the goal line and recommended a system whereby prompt announcements would be made on all rulings.

Writes Okeson.

In advocating a radical change in the scoring system, Crowley wrote Okeson as follows:

"A game of football should never be won or lost by the so-called try for point. Therefore I suggest that the try for point be eliminated. I further suggest the rules committee set up a new method for scoring, as follows: Each first down, 1 point; safety, 2 points; goal from field, 3 points; touchdown, 6 points. Should the game stand a tie at the end of the fourth period, I suggest an additional period of five minutes, with the number of points in that extra period to determine the result of the game."

This is basically similar to ideas long held by Glenn S. (op) Warner, famous coach. Although its adoption by the rules committee is considered highly unlikely, Crowley feels the time is ripe for serious consideration of the change.

No Objections.

"I have found no sound objections to putting more premium on first downs," said the veteran official "The proposed change would make football more of a team game than ever, placing the emphasis on what all 22 players do rather than upon the work of a specialist.

"The touchdown still would be the big thing to shoot for. The change would add, rather than detract, interest from the spectator's viewpoint. There would be less possibility of a tie, within the regulation 60 minutes, and the suggested overtime period surely would settle most, if not all, deadlocks that occurred."

Taking up the much-discussed rule on forward-pass interference, in the spotlight last season as a result of a disputed decision in the Army-Notre Dame game, Crowley passed on to Okeson, minus his approval, a proposal made by Tommy Hughitt, of Buffalo.

15-yard Penalty.

Instead of giving the offended team possession of the point of interference with the pass-catcher Hughitt would penalize the defensive team 15 yards measured "from the spot of the preceding down." Further, in a case of roughing an eligible offensive man, Hughitt would give the ball to the offended team at the spot of the foul or, in

Brooklyn Secures Freddy Lindstrom

By the United Press.

Brooklyn, Jan. 16.—Freddy Lindstrom, third baseman and outfielder, recently cut adrift by the Chicago Cubs, has accepted terms to play with Brooklyn in 1936, the Dodgers announced today. Lindstrom, who formerly played with the Giants and Pirates before joining the Cubs last winter, probably will play centerfield for the Dodgers.

It is understood that the Dodgers gave Lindstrom a substantial bonus for signing, and tendered him a contract almost as lucrative as the one he had with the Cubs.

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

FAR be it from this department to pick an argument but of all the mental brainstorms that ever evolved from a meeting of the supposedly best minds, the proposals advanced yesterday by the Eastern Association of Football Officials anent the football scoring hit a new high for absurdity and a new low in point of logic.

POVICH.

In another column close by they have gone on record as suggesting (1) that 1 point be awarded a team for making a first down, and (2) that should the game be tied at the end of the fourth period an additional five-minute period be played with the number of points scored in the extra period to determine the winner.

I say that would be a fine how-dee-do. How long since the making of a first down has been any indication of superiority of one team over another. Why, some of our most notoriously worst football teams have become famous for their ability to roll up first downs and for their inability to score touchdowns. A case in point is the George Washington-Rice game at Griffith Stadium last fall. G. W. made 22 first downs compared to 6 for Rice yet took a 41-to-0 beating.

On the basis of scoring that the Eastern officials suggest, the score of that Rice-G. W. game, if single points were awarded for first downs, would have been 47 to 22. George Washington, lacking the punch to score even a single touchdown, would have scored 22 points. What do they pay off on anyway, if not on touchdowns? How long since the making of six first downs in midfield has been considered the equivalent of a touchdown?

IT'S WHEN the going gets tough, when the play is deep in scoring territory, that the true effectiveness of both teams is brought out.

Any coach will admit that the first downs come ten times tougher inside the 20-yard line than they do in midfield or deep in a team's own territory. Why, if the proposals of the Eastern officials were adopted you'd see football a completely changed game with teams trying not for all the all-important touchdowns but for those easily won single points.

Coaches, seeking to win as usual in an effort to save their jobs, would send their teams out to pile up those first downs. It would be a question not of advancing the ball deep into enemy territory and trying for a touchdown, but retaining the ball in midfield as much as possible. The enemy is never massed in midfield, the way is open for forward passes and trick runs, but down near the goal line where the defensive forces are concentrated those first downs do not come so easy.

And as far as that proposed extra five-minute period after the fourth quarter if the game ends in a tie is concerned, now you tell one. If it is not quite fair for a team to lose a game by virtue of the point after touchdown, how about losing a game by virtue of the point scored on a first down in midfield during the extra five-minute period? It don't make sense.

Who would they give possession of the ball to at the start of the five-minute extra period. The team that elects to receive the kick would certainly be the top-heavy favorite to win. The defensive team might not even have a chance to rush the ball during that extra five minutes. As I was saying, it don't make sense.

IT DOES seem slightly unfair, at that, for a team to be beaten by the margin of a point after touchdown. The winning or losing kick is the effort of only one individual and thus the entire team suffers or is rewarded becaues of one erring or talented toe.

If the point-after-touchdown rule must be trifled with, this department indorses the suggestion of my fran' Davis J. Walsh, who has advanced what I believe to be the most logical of all the suggestions anent the football scoring system.

Walsh would scale the importance of the points after touchdown according to the manner in which they were scored. If it were by a kick, he would count 1 point; if the team chose to score after the touchdown on a pass, he would count it 2 points, and if the ball were rushed across, he would give the team credit for 3 points.

Thus, the number of tie games would be terrifically reduced. The point after touchdown would become more of a gamble. If a team chose to go conservative and kick the ball for a 7-to-0 lead, the other team would have the opportunity to gamble on a pass or a run after scoring a touchdown and thus go out in front. It would place a premium on nerve and strategy which ought to count a heluva lot more than—well, first downs, for instance.

Four New Teams Carded; Four Will Be Played in Washington.

GEORGETOWN'S 1936 football schedule, announced yesterday, has the Hoyas billed for eight games, four of them away.

Four new names appear on the list, two of them anemically weak outfits, and the others but little better. They are Deleware, Shenandoah, Bucknell and West Virginia. All but West Virginia will come here. The only other home game is with Maryland, and that may be shifted to College Park.

The season will open October 3 with Delaware. Following in order are Shenandoah, Bucknell and New York University. October 31 is an open date, and then comes West Virginia, Manhattan, Maryland and the University of Miami. The Hoyas will invade the land of sunshine, palms and roulette wheels for this last game.

In-and-Outer in 1935.

Bucknell was an in-and-out eleven last season, winning four of eight games and tying one. It climaxed the season with a thrilling and wholly unexpected victory over Temple.

Dusek Rises To Beat Cox Amid Boos

Uses Bandaged Elbow to Great Advantage on Rival's Face.

Capacity Crowd Views 42½-Minute Match at Turner Arena.

By George Considine.

WITH a capacity crowd in attendance, Earnest Ernie Dusek, successor to Rude Rudy Dusek, last night thumped out a roundly booed decision over Kansas City Joe Cox in the feature match of the weekly wrestling show at the Turner Arena. The end was brought about after 42½ minutes of fouling by virtue of a combination merry-go-round and body slam.

Time and time again Cox proved himself to be made of stern stuff, indeed, as he not only weathered numerous toe-to-toe exchanges, but frequently gained a decided edge both in brute strength and grip repertoire.

Uses Looping Right.

It was Dusek who started the battle in the opening minute when he bashed Joe with a looping right. Seeing that Ernie wanted to play roughly, Cox quickly warmed to his task and battered his way into great favor with the crowd, which took a hostile attitude toward his opponent.

The only way Dusek could make any headway was to bring his heavily bandaged elbow across Cox's face, thus momentarily blinding him. When the customers demanded that Referee Bennah Bortnick remove the bandage, Dusek turned from the fray and protested.

Quick to sense an opening, Cox rushed in for the kill and Ernie took many knees and elbows before he was able to cut loose with a flying tackle. Cox side-stepped nicely, allowing Dusek to plunge headlong out of the ring.

Dusek came back and applied his bandaged elbow to Cox's face once again. So aroused was the Kansas City lad that he banged Dusek through the ropes and then went out and banged him back through again after which he proceeded to perform three straight body slams, but Dusek bounced back up like the proverbial check.

When the customers grew restless, Dusek finally managed to get Cox by his ankles and swing him round and around. A leather-lunged galleryite livened up the party by soloing the appropriate "Music Goes Round" selection.

Over in a Flash.

That done, Earnest Ernest absently hoisted Joe into the smoke-filled ozone and slammed him to the mat. Bortnick wheezed out his count and the thing was over. Just like that.

Quite a hectic session was the semifinal before Dean Detton's rolling leg lock persuaded Frank Judson, former Harvard wrestling coach, to say "Uncle." For the entire 20 minutes the boys slugged each other with great abandon, frequently diving into the laps of the ringsiders.

Huge Hans Steinke and Ivan (The Terrible) Managoff huffed and puffed in approved union style to a 30-minute draw, while in the opener Irv Cofield airplane spun Joe Narcki into oblivion after 14½ minutes of fumbling.

Trainer of Negro Sees Bout Lasting No More Than 3 Rounds.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, is ready to set off another blast of dynamite tomorrow night.

Conqueror of all opposition in his amazing drive for the world's heavyweight championship, Louis will meet Charley Retzlaff, lantern-jawed rancher, with a terrific right-hand punch, in a battle scheduled to go 15 rounds or less at the Chicago Stadium. Indications tonight were that 20,000 spectators would witness the bout, with gate receipts around $100,000.

Louis, with Carnera, Baer, Uzcudun and Levinsky strewn along his march, victims of his murderous punch, was a 1-to-10 shot in all discussions, but curiosity existed as to just what the Brown Bomber would do if Farmer Retzlaff drove one of his knockout punches smashing against the Louis chin.

Promises to Fight.

Retzlaff, victorious in 55 out of 68 battles by knockouts, promises to fight Louis instead of running away, and also promises to hurt him, which no other fighter has been able to do.

When Louis shuffles into the ring expecting to achieve his twenty-third knockout in 27 fights at the expense of Retzlaff, he will be accepting his fourth 15-round bout in his 19-month-old professional career. That he never needed anywhere near 15 rounds to dispose of Carnera, Baer, Uzcudun or Levinsky is a matter of record. In fact, against the four of them Louis used only 15 rounds, six for Carnera, four each for Max and Paulino, and only one for Levinsky.

Predicts Knockout.

"I'll knock Louis out. I'll hurt him with my right," said Retzlaff.

"He'll get knocked out," mumbled Louis.

"Somebody's sure to get knocked out," chime din Jim Mullen, matchmaker.

After 10 days of training, Louis has attained the lightning form he has displayed in his major bouts. Golden-toothed Jack Blackburn, his trainer, said Louis would weigh 201 or 202 pounds, the highest he has scaled in his sensational career. When he met Uzcudun he weighed 200½ and 199¾ for Baer.

No Longer Than Third.

Blackburn was asked how long, in his opinion, the fight would go. He grinned.

"Just as soon as we hit, boy, it will be all over. Maybe the first round, maybe the second, maybe the third. Not any longer than that."

Ring sharps agree that any puncher of Retzlaff's ability is capable of upsetting even the ring's greatest killer—if he throws the punches. Retzlaff says he will throw everything from the start and gamble on the result. If Louis n

Yawkey Ends Buying; Now 'Hopes for Best'

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Jan. 16.—Thomas A. Yawkey estimated today he had spent $3,000,000 on his Boston Red Sox, but balked at setting them up as a preseason American League pennant hope.

Instead, he said he was "hoping for the best" this year, and building for the future, believing that ultimately he will own a great baseball team.

"I know a lot of people are conceding Boston the pennant now," he said, "but it's too early in the year to concede anybody anything. We won't have an outstanding club such as the Yankees or the Athletics in their great years, but with veterans to steady our younger players, and with gradually improving teamwork, I think within a few years we'll have a team as good as those Yankee and Athletic powerhouses."

The Boston owner, here to attend a preview of the American League's baseball movie "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," said he has tightened the purse strings and if the Sox acquire any additional talent, it will be through trades.

Asked what will be done with the new stars and some of the old, Yawkey laughingly said, "That's for Cronin to figure out. He has the ball players. Now, he'll have to figure out what to do with them."

Loughran 'Robbed' As Britisher Wins

London, Jan. 16 (AP).—Tommy Loughran, former light-heavyweight champion, tonight dropped a ten-round decision to Tommy Farr, 22-year-old Welshman, at Albert Hall. Each weighed 191 pounds.

The decision was so unpopular with the fans that cries of "robbery" and boos filled the hall for 20 minutes after the referee's decision was announced. British sports writers were almost unanimous in giving the American seven of the ten rounds.

Farr attacked steadily, attempting to force the pace, but Loughran skillfully tied him up and jabbed continually with his left to render the Welchman's attack ineffective.

Loughran's manager protested the decision and demanded to see the referee's scorecard, but officials said protests were useless as the referee's decision is final in England.

18,000 See Whopper Win Inaugural Feature at Hialeah Park

$9.60 Is Paid After Head Triumph

Stand Pat, Favorite, Is Second; Double Nets Betters $343.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 16.—Under the tropical setting that makes this race track the most beautiful in America, 18,000 winter vacationists went for racing in a big way this afternoon. In fact, "big" is the most used adjective in Florida, and all persons who are not "big people" are champions.

Thus it was only flitting that the biggest horse to march to the post on the opening day here was the winner of the biggest race of the day—the $3,500 added Inaugural Handicap. They named him Whopper, this gigantic son of Pharamond II and Romance, they sent him on the track today with a big impost of 122 pounds, and he won by the margin of his big head, because he must have a heart in proportion.

Ridden By Steffen.

With the veteran jockey, Earl Steffen, beating a tune on his flank, Whopper forged to the front as the bulky field entered the stretch and then clung tenaciously to his precious margin in the final drive. Stand Pat, the favorite, came through the stretch like a wild horse to finish second, a length and a half ahead of a tiring member of the "mutuel field," Rock X. Fourteen other horses were strung out along the chocolate-colored stretch.

The crowd, the racing and the betting probably fulfilled Joseph D. Widener's dream the night the press agents say he mentally pictured this gorgeous track. Celebrities brushed elbows with butter and egg men throughout the afternoon, but the $9.60 mutuel on Whopper was paid in the same money used at Charles Town and Marlboro.

Eleven-Minute Post Delay.

There was an 11-minute delay at the post in the featured 6-furlong race, in which the large field waved opposite the clubhouse like a crazy quilt in a hurricane. When the start finally came, Polish Beau bounded to the front, followed by Rock X, and Dancing Doll to make the race smack of Bowie at that point, but Whopper was getting those bulky legs organized at the moment and he was soon in the thick of the battle.

Polish Beau continued to flatter his backers swinging for the stretch, but Whopper, now urged by Jockey Steffen, was gaining with leaps and bounds while Stand Pat had begun his move from the second flight. While still on the elbow of the track, Polish Beau suddenly lost caste and Whopper, the ungainly, took command.

Stand Pat Rallies.

Stand Pat had developed the momentum that was to put him in the thick of the main struggle. At the edge of the "Tote" board he reached the flying tail of Whopper. At the mutuel board, Stand Pat had slid up to his rival's flank. Jockey Wayne Wright gave him the riding "works" but it was a long way past that big Whopper and, as I have previously reported, that big head was still in the clear at the imaginary wire.

Jockey Jimmy Stout, a thin fellow, made the daily double a personal affair. He was in the saddle of both horses that figured in the combination which brought a reward of $343.60 to the lucky backers. The horses were Our Admiral, an $18.70 shot in the first race, and Little Dinah, a $56.90 mutuel, in the third race. Stout's riding was an important factor in each of the victories and he completed a saddle "triple" in the fifth race with a masterful exhibition of Go Quick, a $6.70 pay-off.

WHOPPER, away in first flight and close to leaders, swung to outside, engaged the leaders, disposed of POLISH BEAU, then held on strongly to stall off STAND PAT. Latter forced race to outside after being outrun first half, circled his field and closed with a tremendous rush. ROCK X, a strong factor from beginning, offered stiff contention and fought it out readily when placed to a severe drive.

GO QUICK, breaking from outside and having much speed, sprinted into easy lead in backstretch, was given mild breathing spell in final turn, was hard ridden when straightened into homestretch and barely lasted. MOUNTAINY MAN, showing considerable improvement, obtained racing room on inside and was wearing winner down. WOODLANDER saved ground and rallied steadily in last furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:23. Off at 5:27½. Winner, Erindale Stable's br. g. SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:55. Off at 5:57½. Winner, G. H. Emick's gr. g. Braddock

Calls Louis a Bum, Leaves For South; Anxious to Train.

By Jack Miley.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—James J. Braddock is going back to the docks. He will return to Pier 6 via Palm Beach, which is as good a route as any we can think of at the moment. The world's heavyweight champion—remember Maxie Baer and the fateful night of June 13, 1935?—took his way Southward this frosty morning behind the wheel of a mauve-and-chromium gas guzzler that looks like a pup out of the Burlington Zephyr.

In Florida he'll hobnob with the Stotesburys' the Biddles and the Cromwells, just to see how the other half lives. A democratic fellow, Jimmy, at all times. He'll probably take a sly whirl at the roulette wheel and twist old Tige's tail in Col. Bradley's gold-plated gambling hall.

He expects to venture a few bobs on some bandy-legged oats masticator that gallops uncertainly around those pink swans at the Hialeah race track and he'll wind up his 30-day trek by dropping over to shell-shocked Havana to catch the main bout in a current revolution.

BUT when our James comes back to town, he'll swap his white flannels for the old dungarees and order his man servant, "McJitters, my bale hook!" For the simple and unassuming Braddock, surfeited with the rubber chicken and Fourth of July oratory of the banquet circuits, is anxious to return to a life of honest toil.

The stuffed shirts and local hero hunters from here to Frisco have given him a terrific workout. Refereeing wrestling matches, taking bows at Elks' smokers and unveiling hook-and-ladders at firehouses in Pottstown and Chambersburg isn't precisely the exercise best designed to keep a guy in condition for a summer slug soiree with death at 10 p. m. Joe Louis.

So Jim has decided to chuck his soft touch and go in for those back-breaking calisthenics that was his daily dish before he became head man of hurt.

NEW JERSEY'S pater familias cocked his $35 oxfords on the window sill of his town suite overlooking Central Park, flicked a dust speck from the knife-edged britches of his tailored tweeds and explained yesterday: "This life of Riley is getting me down I've got to do something, so I think I'll get my old job back on the docks.

"I'm softening up and the first thing I know I'll be one of those steam-heated sissies, like that bird Baer. No kidding when I get back from Florida I'm going to grab my bale hook and hustle freight for a month or so. That's the greatest exercise in the world; look what it did for me! The gyms and that golf and all those pansy games are the bunk."

"I'm going to chauffeur packing boxes up the gangways of those boats—that's what puts hair on your chest! I don't need the money and I won't take the money. So the boys can't say I'm chiseling some needy guy out of work. I'll give my pay check away right down there where I earn it.

The champion is all in a dither over Joe Louis' assertion that Braddock rates No. 4 in his list of heavies, below Baer, Schmeling and Carnera. Jim thinks Louis isn't quite bright from a box-office standpoint, when he lists him beneath two men he has already beaten.

The slow-speaking Irishman's battered countenance bore a twisted little grin as he pointed out. "Gee, when I know I've got to fight a guy I try to make him look like John L. Sullivan—before the Bell!"

FURTHERMORE, he thinks the sepia-streak is getting jittery about his title chances. The laruping longshoreman holds Joe in the utmost contempt. Jim argues that Louis hasn't proven himself a great fighter because, while he's had a couple dozen fights, nobody has fought him.

Braddock blurted, "Personally, I think he's a bum! I've yet to see somebody hit him! Baer didn't do it, Carnera didn't do it and nobody else has done it! But James J. Braddock will do it or go down swinging! He won't put that dog eye on me, for if he does, I'll laugh right in his face! They all said Maxie Baer was a big, bad wolf—phooee! Those guys are licked before they climb in the ring with Joe Lousey—pardon, Louis! —ought to get themselves jobs as elevator jockeys! They say Louis wants that championship more than money. Well, I wan't both. But I've got the title, so let him come and get it!"

Title Hopes At Stake in Battle

Hoyas' Plan of Attack Is Altered to Cope With Strong Invaders.

LIGHTNING may or may not strike twice in the same place, but its second cousin, Pittsburgh's basketball team, which defeated Georgetown here last winter, hits town again tonight to resume its court warfare with Georgetown's sharp-shooting sophomores at 8:30 o'clock on the Tech High School court.

Discarding the keen rivalry existing between the two, which augurs well for 40 minutes of trigger action, the game assumes added importance inasmuch as it is an Eastern Conference contest and has a strong bearing on the championship hopes of both clubs.

Georgetown lost its first and only conference game to Temple by a 44-43 count just before the Christmas holidays, and Pitt, too, was knocked off in that period, losing in an upset to Carnegie Tech. Another defeat would just about shatter whatever title hopes they entertain.

Three Straight Titles.

Pitt has dominated the conference since its organization three years ago, capturing three consecutive championships under the expert guidance of Dr. H. C. Carlson, and it is rare when the Panthers do not win at least one position on the mythical All-America quintet.

Last season, however, they experienced difficulty in retaining their laurels, remaining on the throne only after whipping West Virginia in a play-off. Two years ago Georgetown was the only school to conquer the Smoky City quintet, beating it on Jack Crowley's last-second pot shot.

Georgetown will win tonight if Coach Fred Mesmer's intensive preparations do not go for naught. Mesmer has altered his plan of battle somewhat to offset Pitt's well-laid defensive plans.

Short-Pass Attack Battle.

The Hoyas will concentrate on their short-pass attack, however, with Gibeau, Bassin and Nolan expected to bear the brunt of the burden.

A preliminary game between freshmen teams from Georgetown and Maryland will open the twin-bill at 7 o'clock. Varsity line-ups:

G'town.	Line-ups. Position.	Pittsburgh.

(84) Bassin	R. F.	Zelesnick(3)

case the roughing occurred within 15 yards of the preceding down, give the offended team an option.

Other changes put forward by Crowley include: Bringing the ball in 15 yards from the sidelines after it goes out of bounds, instead of 10; eliminating the opportunity for a fair catch of a kicked ball after the ball has been touched by any defensive player; a penalty of 5 yards for the touching of a kicked ball first by a player on the kicking side; elimination of rule requiring substitutes to report at start of second half.

Rydzewski, C. U.'s Ace Boxer, Ex-N. J. Champ; Never K. O.'d

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THE next time you see "Chuck" Rydzewski step into the ring and pop a rival light-heavyweight on the chin for the pugilistic honor of Catholic University and his own satisfaction, don't kid yourself into the belief that you're watching an ordinary pupil of punch.

Don't be misled by his timid-soul tactics, and don't feel too sorry for him if he walks out to meet some tough looking chap who appears capable of tearing off his head with a single punch. Pity the other guy.

Rydzewski si no run-of-the-mine boxer, as Johnny Gormley, of Maryland, may discover tomorrow night when they meet at Brookland. He comes from a family of fighters, and and at one time he held the State amateur heavyweight championship of New Jersey. In addition to that two of his brothers, Walter and Chester, the latter who fought under the name of Chester Rogers, won championships in New York's Golden Gloves tourney, and that, my friends, is where the title winners earn their medals.

"Chuck's" real name is—of all things—Ferdinand. Some of the boys on the campus dubbed him Fred, but others plastered on him the cognomen of "Chup," so the sportswriters tagged him "Chuck." His fighting career dates back to his early youth when Walter, the eldest of four brothers, used to work out with a friend in the basement. Walter was and still is a keen student of the sport and an excellent coach. "Chuck's" style of fighting is eloquent testimony to his tutoring technique.

It wasn't long before all four brothers were taking turns beating up the friend who, so it seems, wasn't a world champion.

"Chuck's" twin brother, Howard, improved enough to enter various amateur tournaments and in 1932 he won the middleweight crown in Golden Gloves competition. Only last year, Roger, the youngest, won the same title in the same tournament. "Chuck" won his New Jersey honors in the Newark Star-Eagle tourney several years ago. He fought in the heavyweight class, weighing 181 pounds.

Rydzewski has no professional asknocked out, and was on the floor only once. That happened during an amateur show in Newark when he was tagged solidly in the chin, but it so happened that he hit his opponent simultaneously and just as hard and both went down. "Chuck" eventually took the decision.

He was defeated last year by a Manhattan man when the Jaspers invaded Washington, and modestly admits that he expects to lose some more before he quits the ring.

Ryzdewski has no professional aspirations in boxing. He indulges in the sport for exercise and because he likes the hours, as it were, but he isn't going to risk getting punch drunk for the sake of a few dollars he might pick up. He intends to make the most of his education and may teach after graduating.

His left jab, which happens to be the best seen around here in a long while, is the fruit of long and painstaking drills under Brother Walter's tutelage. From Walter, too, he has learned the gentle art of rolling with punches and ducking. Ed LaFond, Catholic U. coach, is showing him how to use his right to the best advantage, and from the way he treated Lou Marks last week, we would say that he is making rapid progress.

Louis and Retzlaff To Battle Tonight

him first it will not be because he wasn't trying, the big farmer declared. Retzlaff will not be outweighed more than 4 or 5 pounds, as he expects to go into the ring at 196.

Louis, who earned $364,000 with his fists last year, may pick up another $40,000 tomorrow night, as he will receive 40 per cent of the gate, radio and moving pictures. Retzlaff will receive 17½ per cent of the gate receipts.

As a matter of insurance, Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Twentieth Century Club of New York, has an option on Retzlaff's services for three fights, if he should triumph. Jacobs also has a five-year option on Louis and has a hand in the promotion of tomorrow night's bout, which is scheduled to start at 11 p. m. Washington time.

Alexandria Team Plays Petersburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 16.—Alexandria High School will invade Petersburg tomorrow for a game with Petersburg High School. Coach Maurice Givens, Manager Gorham and 10 players will make the trip.

Saturday at 8:30 p. m. the Presidents will be hosts to Tech, of Washington, in the George Washington gym. The Post seniors will meet the George Washington seconds in a preliminary at 7:30 p. m.

Georgetown Freshmen Trounce Riordin, 53-24

Amassing a 25-8 lead in the first half, Georgetown's Freshmen team ran roughshod over the Raymond Riordin School tossers yesterday at the Hilltop, winning by a score of 53-24. Gay Edelin, former Eastern High School star, and Tim Murphy, led the Freshmen attack, chalking up 25 points between them.

Western Meets Tech Today On Court

Central Faces Roosevelt in School Series, Eastern to Idle.

By John R. Vosburgh.

WITHOUT lifting a hand other than possibly to suppress a royal yawn, Eastern High's rulers of interhigh basketball will have a couple of more thorns removed from their championship path today. Part of the removing process takes place at Roosevelt, where Tech and Western will be struggling for the honor. The other half is to occur at Tech with Central removing Roosevelt or vice versa.

Of the two attractions, that at Roosevelt stands out more prominently in view of Tech's recent upset of Central and Western's conquest of Roosevelt. Tech's fast pace against the Mount Pleasanters, who were favored to be the strongest threat to Eastern's throne, has stamped it as the team of the hour at this writing.

Change Positions.

With the series picture outside of Eastern's spot in the foreground, changing as rapidly as the line-up of the Boston Red Sox, however, the "team of the hour" might well be any other team but Tech at the close of play this afternoon. Both games start at 3:30 p. m.

Defying such concrete evidence as comparative scores, Tech should enter the game the favorite to vanquish Western, and Central is the choice over Roosevelt. Roosevelt has so long been on the short end of the odds that it is now something of a custom to assign them that role. Eastern, however, trounced Tech, 45 to 25 while Western held the champs to a mere 36-24 triumph, but so impressive was Tech's comeback against Central that it would call for a decided reversal of form to make it the underdog.

Place at Stake.

The consolation of prize of interhigh sports, the runner-up position, is undoubtedly hanging in the balance on today's battles. The teams that are beaten will have two defeats on their record with by far more than half the series to go. Western, the runner-up last year, appears to have a slim chance of retaining its standing.

Coach Rusty Thompson, of Tech, will again start his young sophomore from the "kentry," Tommy Dobyns, at center, since Wes Snow, who severely injured his wrist, probably is now out for the season. Dobyns' feat of holding Capt. Bill Thompson, of Central, to 4 points was one of the features of Tech's victory Tuesday.

St. John's Defeats Gaithersburg, 34-22

Despite the fact that Miller, of Gaithersburg, accounted for high-point honors with an even dozen, St. John's courtmen hammered out their eleventh victory in twelve starts yesterday in the Vermont avenue gym as the Marylanders bowed, 34 to 22. Johnny Swagart starred for the winners.

Bank Reserves $90,000,000 Higher in Week

Excess Now 3.09 Billions More Than Legal Requirements.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board announced last night that excess reserves of member banks resumed their sharp upward tendency during the week ended January 15 with a gain of $90,000,000. Reserve balances of all member banks, the board said, amounted to $5,859,000,000 at the end of the week which was $3,090,000,000 in excess of legal requirements. The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended January 15, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,485,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $21,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

"On January 15 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,485,000,000, an increase of $9,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $114,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $19,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, offset in part by increases of $14,000,000 in monetary gold stock and $16,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency and decreases of $61,000,000 in money in circulation and $31,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks. Member bank reserve balances on January 15 were estimated to be approximately $3,090,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

France Subsidizes Motor Car Exports

Paris, (AP).—France, alarmed over the loss of foreign makets for her automobiles to other countries, has voted a special export subsidy to her auto manufactures. The producers are paid a bounty of 1.80 francs per kilogram—about five cents a pound on automobiles exported from France.

The subsidy is in the form of a tax abatement, and the total given to any company may not exceed the total it pays to the government in taxes. Most of France's exported automobiles go to French colonies and to Spain, Italy, Switzerland and Belgium.

United Corp. Assets Rise $6.09 a Share

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—United Corporation, utility investing company concern sponsored by the Morgan-Bonbright interests, reported today a rise in net asset value at the year end to $7.23 a common share, compared with $1.14 a share at the end of 1934. Both figures are on the basis of valuing securities at their market prices, and are after allowing for the prior claim of the preferred stock. Net income for 1935 was $9,049,836 or 11 cents a share on the common stock, after preferred dividends. In the preceeding year profit was $9,979,580 or 17 cents a share.

World Copper Stocks Register Increase

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Dow, Jones & Co., said today world stocks of refined copper amounted to 485,300 tons at the end of December compared with 476,216 tons a month earlier. This was the first increase in stocks during 1935. At the end of December, 1934, world stocks totalled 591,000 tons.

Domestic stocks were responsible for the increase, amounting to 231,400 tons against 221,022 tons at the end of November. Foreign stocks decreased to 253,900 tons from 255,194 tons a month earlier.

Bethlehem Steel Units To Be Merged

Arrears on Preferred Will Be Paid Off With New Stock.

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 16.—Bethlehem Steel Corporation, second largest steel enterprise in the country, tonight moved to throw off its holding company cloak and become an operating company, with its steel-making properties welded into a single great unit with assets of over $500,000,000.

At the same time, stockholders were asked to approve a plan to pay off arrears on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, amounting to $21 a share on April 1 next, with an issue of 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock, $20 par value. Preferred stockholders would receive one share of new preferred and $1 in cash on each share they now hold.

Under the reorganization plan, the executive bonus system now in effect, providing for payments to executives up to 8 per cent of consolidated net earnings would be dropped and a new special incentive plan set up, limited to 5 per cent of net earnings and with payments of not more than one-fifteenth of cash dividends payable only after preferred and common stockholders have received cash dividens for the period in question.

Stockholders will be asked to approve reorganization at a special meeting to be held at the company's offices in Newark, N. J., on February 26.

Separate Tax Plan.

The letter to stockholders pointed out that under the Federal income tax laws, as amended in 1934, each subsidiary corporation must file a return and pay taxes on its separate net taxable income, while the parent corporation may include 10 per cent of the dividends it receives, or a net 1½ per cent on total dividends it receives.

Dividends on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock were omitted after the July 1, 1932 payment. A single dividend of 1.75 was paid in October, 1934, another of $1.75 in October, 1935, and a third for a like amount on January 2 of this year, leaving accumulations at $19.25. The plan to clear up these arrears carries through April 1, when they would amount to $21 a share, to be met by one share of the new $20 par 5 per cent preferred stock, and $1 in cash, for each share of present 7 per cent preferred.

Rubber Consumption Sets All-Time Record

New York, Jan. 16 (AP).—Domestic manufacturers consumed in 1935 a record amount of crude rubber, the Rubber Manufacturers Association reported today. About 497,150 long tons were used, exceeding all other consumption figures in the industry's history.

The 1934 takings totaled 453,223 tons. The previous record was established in 1929 when 467,400 tons were consumed.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance Moderately With Low Priced Shares the Favorites; Bonds Firm.

New York, Jan. 16.—Activity declined in the share market, turnover amounting to 3,124,491 shares, but the tone was firmer than yesterday and no repetition of the last hour selling took place. Bonds were steady, as were most commodities. May wheat closed ⅝ of a cent higher at 100⅝ cents a bushel.

Government bonds today were fairly firm. Apparently the market felt that way about it because, for the moment, it chose to follow the confident assertions of such experts as Jesse Jones and James Farley, rather than to heed the frank admission of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that it was all a matter of guesswork—and of mirrors; or perhaps the Government bond market is doing what it has been doing for a year or so, namely, holding firm on a combination of Treasury support, the rising tide of excess reserves and the lack of other outlet for bank funds. As Chairman Jones of the RFC said, the banks are so heavily loaded with Government bonds that they do not dare sell. Their raison d'etre is to finance the Federal Government, and they are fulfilling their destiny.

Smart Man Needed.

For its frankness, if for nothing else, Secretary Morgenthau's contribution to the sum total of knowledge and guessing on Government finance was of unusual interest and value. He enumerated the many "ifs" in the program for outlay in the next year or so, including make-up of farm bonuses, soldiers' bonus, processing tax refund, relief. So many unknown quantities exist, he said, that no one could tell. That apparently is President Roosevelt's view, and is the reason why the budget message contained little reference to any but ordinary expenses of government.

"So many things have happened that affect the Treasury," quoth Secretary Morgenthau, "that I certainly am not smart enough and I haven't met anybody that is smart enough, who can say what is the future of the Government bond market."

Fireside Talks.

That statement won't bring much reassurance to the 15,000 banks that are heavily loaded with Government bonds, nor is it calculated to smooth the way for future financing, but it is about as close to the truth as it is possible for any ordinary person to get. Perhaps some of the more blatant type of brainbuster can enlighten the Secretary.

Secretary Morgenthau dwelt on the delicacy of the question of Government credit. "One day there is confidence and the people who buy bonds are with you, and then overnight something happens (not a fireside radio talk to friends and investors, surely?) and they won't buy.

What Secretary Morgenthau neglected to point out—possibly out of a feeling of delicacy for his comrades of the New Deal—was that the rapid changes rung on and off the stage at Washington are not those which the ordinary course of politics and business dictate, nor are the great majority of them more than indirectly connected with the fact that business is not as robust as it once was. In large measure the hot and cold blowers of the New Deal, the strainers for something new and startling in economic and fiscal theories, the irresponsible members of Congress, the promoters of socialism to supplant the old American traditions, and the mere mind-changers at the seat of Government are responsible for uncertainty over Government credit.

First Report.

The first regular quarterly report for a large industrial concern with securities listed on the stock exchange was published today by Gulf States Steel. The report for the fourth quarter of 1935 showed a small net profit, compared with a net loss in the corresponding quarter of the previous year. That promises to be the color of many steel company statements, and the general improvement of industrial earnings undoubtedly was considerable. Rising official optimism, reports of large sales, and increased dividends have given testimony on that point.

Cup and Lip.

Manufacturing companies foresighted and courageous enough to resist payment of processing taxes, and which now find large amounts to their credit held by the courts, are finding once more that the distance is long and shaky, sometimes, between the cup of a court's judgment and the lip of a successful litigant. Lists are being published of the amounts due the various companies, and the stock market is trying to make up its mind how much discounting it ought to do on that score. Actually, the president of General Mills reminds stockholders and the public, no money has yet been paid over; he is a bit skeptical whether any ever will be paid. He seems to be in the same boat with President Jackson Reynolds of the First National Bank, who referring to deposit guarantee assessments, observed that "Washington always manages to get us in the end."

New Deal Hope.

Some of the rapidly growing hope for better times based on burial of New Deal bones was shaken down a bit today by the press speculations on possible resignation from the Supreme Court of Justice Van Devanter, one of the conservative members. It was supposed that appointment of a justice to fill any vacancy would naturally go to a man whose constitutional constructions would be exceedingly broad.

Speculation.

Much of the buying of the low priced shares is prompted soley by a spirit of quick trigger speculation. Traders, especially those with limited resources, think that the lower the price of the stock the greater the chance for profit, on a percentage basis; and furthermore they argue that in this sort of a market nobody cares whether the low price reflects receivership, deficits, lack of assets, or overcapitalization, or anything else. Pick a stock selling for a dollar or so a share allow a tip to escape in a brokerage house boardroom, and then let nature take its course. Calahan Zinc was a good sample offered today of the sudden rise of low-priced issues, nudged along by a string of sales of one to five thousand share lots.

First Billion.

Silver certificates in circulation this month crossed the first $1,000,000,000 figure. It is not proving difficult to circulate them, with the rapid retirement of national bank notes and, when the silver notes go out in large denominations, the total in use will mount probably with even greater rapidity.

Coast Line.

Louisville & Nashville's biggest stockholder, Atlantic Coast Line, will receive nearly $300,000 more than a year ago through the dividend of $2 declared today, compared with $1.50 a share a year ago and $1 late in 1935.

Telephone Refunding.

The betting, if any were being done, should not favor Southern Bell Telephone Co. as the next of the Bell family to carry out a major refunding operation. The next telephone company to enter the market already has been selected, but it is not Southern. As far as investors are concerned the name of the company does not make any particular difference, for these refunding loans are shaped rather closely to the one pattern.

Moderate Rally Advances Wheat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Late rallies of wheat prices today, establishing moderate net gains, resulted more from paucity of speculative offerings than from any aggressive demand.

Auto Tariff Cut Asked in Canada

Ottawa, Jan. 16 (AP).—Reduction of motor car tariff rates to 15 per cent on all cars has been proposed before the Canadian tariff board by A. O. Thorne, representing the Canadian importers Association.

Such a rate of duty, Thorne said, would enable Canadian manufacturers to charge $100 more per car than United States manufacturers, but would mean a lower price to the Canadian public due to healthy competition with the United States.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Be Calm, Monty By Harry J. Tuthill

Yes, I knew while the colonel denied it, that it was absurd to even imagine he assaulted Monty and took the map, but
Oh there's another hullabaloo!
In Monty's cabin, and here he comes.
Oh Mr Eldorado, I'm so glad to see you up and around after all the excitement.
Ah, you look a bit excited too, Monty. has anything?
Ah, pardon me Peggy, and Mrs. Bungle, too. I'd like to have a word with Hartford.
It's about the map, old man. Last night I took it out of Bungle's hand, and as I thought, handed it to Captain Cull, but he says.
Yes, of course Monty, you did give me the map of dad's treasure.
Well, let me see oh yes I want to be sure it has not been tampered with, so if you'll let me have it...
Oh rest your mind on that, Monty. I examined the map very closely this morning. It's in perfect condition, old chap.

Culbertson on Bridge

Both Luck and Skill.

I am indebted to Mr. Lee Schmertz, of Pittsburgh, for an interesting hand. His letter, in expurgated form, is as follows: "I enjoy the unenviable distinction of having a rampant imagination that sometimes has dire results. Not always, however. I made five spades against an opponent who had bid one spade, first hand, holding six spades to the K J 9, and the ace-king of hearts."

♣ J 9 4

SOUTH
♠ A Q 10 8 3 2
♥ None
♦ A K J
♣ 6 3 2

Again quoting: "East bid one spade, and I (South) disdainfully bid four spades. I was doubled by East with great glee."

I must point out the obvious—that South was blessed with an inordinate amount of luck in picking up such a dummy. And if this is Mr. Schmertz's regular bidding system, I confess that I would be a trifle nervous as his partner. As he says, however, the play of the hand was interesting.

Declarer ruffed the opening heart lead, and immediately finessed for the club king. A second heart was ruffed and then the ace and jack of diamonds were played, dummy's queen overtaking the second round. A third heart ruff, while East discarded a club, reduced South to four trumps. Now the ace of clubs was cashed, followed by the fourth heart. East ruffed and South overruffed. Now the ace of diamonds had to be ruffed by East, who was reduced to trumps, and the trump return finessed. The process was then repeated—South's last club forced East to lead to South's last two cards—the A Q of trumps. East's two ruffs were the only tricks taken by the defenders.

British Prepare For Arms Race As Japan Quits

Nipponese Admiral Says Navy Ready to Whip U. S. and England.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 16.—Great Britain's imperial defense policy and future requirements of the army, navy and air force were subjected to a further overhauling today.

In authoritative quarters it was said the danger of a world naval race is much closer as a result of Japan's departure yesterday from the international naval conference here.

At the same time, acting quickly to salvage all possible after Japan's walkout, the four remaining powers reached a quick and amicable agreement to exchange building information.

These four, the United States, Britain, France and Italy, also will try to frame a further agreement to restrict and regulate sizes of ships and their armament.

While observers were optimistic that other important agreements will shortly be reached, all recognized the grave uncertainties developed by Japan's departure because she was not granted parity.

British Call Experts.

While the four-power talks were launched, a sub-committee of the British cabinet on defense policy met for the fourth successive day. Numerous technical experts were called in, which led to the speculation in informed quarters as to whether heavy rearmament estimates for the Parliament session February 4 are being drawn up.

The launching of a big British rearmament program has been expected momentarily.

An agreement to exchange naval building information was reached at the first four-power meeting. Technical experts will be named immediately to draw up details of the arrangements whereby this will be done. The committee also agreed upon the terms of a reply to be made to the Japanese letter of withdrawal.

It was expected that technical committees would be appointed at tomorrow's session to study details entailed in the exchange of information.

Britain "Sure" of U. S. Stand.

Great Britain, informed circles said, feels that there is a complete understanding with the United States to maintain parity and that no building race between them is possible, even if building must be stepped up by further Japanese tonnage.

Viscount Monsell, first lord of the admiralty and chairman of the first committee of the conference, sent this message to the Japanese delegation tonight:

"All delegations feel the decision of the Japanese delegation is a matter for real regret. Despite the difficulties created by this decision, they have decided that the conference shall proceed.

"The committee desires me to inquire whether the Japanese government wishes to leave behind an observer or observers who will be able to keep in touch with the work of the conference and inform its government of its progress."

U. S. Shown as Villian.

Tokyo, Jan. 16 (AP).—The United States and Great Britain were pictured as villians in an international melodrama in Japanese newspaper editorials today on the Naval Conference.

The Nichi Nichi asserted: "The insincerity with which the Americans and British participated in the conference is shown by the plans to continue on a four-power basis, which is merely a crafty design to place international stigma upon Japan."

"It seems probable," the paper continued, "that the Americans and British shortly will inaugurate menacing gestures toward Japan by fortifying Pacific islands, but the tactical advantages of such a move have been overestimated.

"Japan must maintain her glorious isolation," said Miyako.

Leading members of the cabinet issued statements insisting that Japan does not plan a naval race, but they contrasted sharply with the more martial ones of naval officials.

Admiral Belligerent.

A typical naval statement was this one by Vice Admiral Sankichi Takahashi, commander in chief of the battle fleet.

"If the Japanese navy is called upon fight the combined power of America and Great Britain I am confident we will win, even if the ratio is ten to one.

"If such a combat came tomorrow this could be proved. The Japanese people need not be afraid. The Washington Treaty was nonsense.

"Japan has its own ideas of methods of fighting and we can build what warships we need without watching other nations.

"If we are compelled to use the short sword to combat a foe brandishing the long sword, I still am sure we have the skill and spirit to win."

Larger newspapers did not publish the vice admiral's statement.

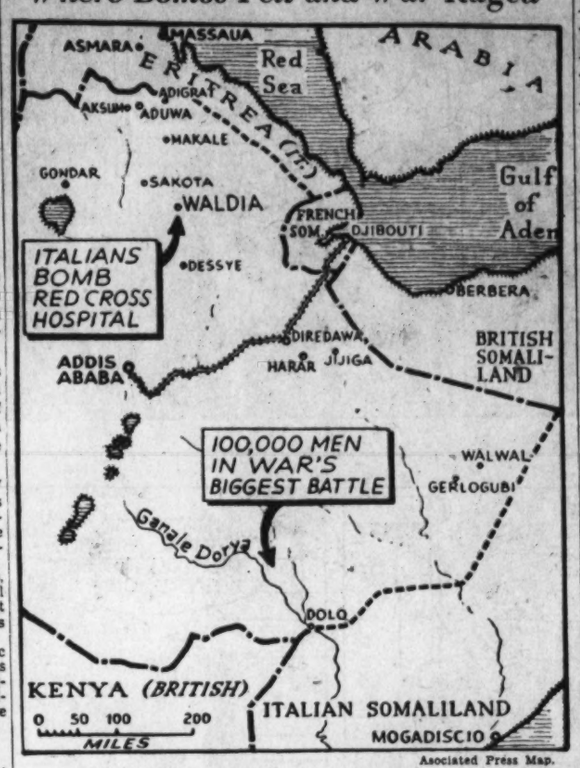
Where Bombs Fell and War Raged



Associated Press Map.

Map shows Waldia, northern Ethiopia, where Italian airmen dropped bombs on a Red Cross hospital, demolishing it and killing 14 natives, according to report from Addis Ababa last night. In the valley of Ganale Dorya, Rome heard that more than 100,000 fighters are locked in "most important" battle of the war.

Fascists Bomb Red Cross Unit Led by Briton

14 Natives Killed, Half of Ethiopian Town Razed by Air Raiders.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Jan. 16.—The Ethiopian government said today a Red Cross unit led by a Briton was destroyed in an Italian air raid and 14 natives were killed.

The attack was at Waldia, 90 miles north of Dessye, field headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Maj. Gerald Burgoyne, a Briton, commanded the unit. He telegraphed Red Cross headquarters here:

"Wake up Geneva. It is evident that the Italians are making special tragets of Red Cross."

"Half the town of Waldia was destroyed by fire," said the Ethiopian communique. "Seven women and seven old men were killed.

35 Persons Wounded.

"Thirty-five persons were wounded, mostly women and children.

"Three Caproni planes made the raid. Six big bombs of 330 pounds each were dropped in the court of the Red Cross unit which was plainly marked with the Red Cross insignia.

"Tents and surgical instruments were destroyed.

"A British ambulance unit from Dessye is going to the rescue."

(Sweden two days ago formally protested to Italy the bombing of Swedish Red Cross unit in which one Swede was killed and another wounded.)

The government said the attack took place at 11 a. m. Tuesday, but Maj. Burgoyne said it was yesterday. He added: "The native town was heavily bombarded for 70 minutes and 14 poor women and children were killed."

Selassie Going to Front.

He apparently was not injured. The town is midway between Dessye and Makale, the forward point of Italy's northern army.

(The British Red Cross in London said Maj. Burgoyne is not in its employ.)

Emperor Haile Selassie, it was believed, is going to the actual front.

His 11-year-old son, Prince Makonnen, returned by plane today from Dessye, where he has been with his father and high government officials said his arrival means the Emperor is going to the front.

Posse Kills Bandit, Halts Bank Holdup

Lawrenceville, Ill., Jan. 16 (AP).—A hurriedly summoned posse late today frustrated an attempted holdup of the Allendale National Bank, 12 miles south of here, fataly wounding one robber and seriously wounding another.

Sheriff M. E. Hastings said the wounded man, shot in an arm and leg, gave his name as Jack Griggs, Bridgeport, Ill. His brother, Dale Griggs, died of a bullet wound through the back. A third man, named by the sheriff as Johnny Bolles, Bridgeport farmer, escaped.

Crowding ten customers into a corner, the robbers, armed with pistols and a sawed-off shotgun, forced the bank cashier to stuff between $700 and $800 in cash into a currency bag. It was recovered.

S. H. Price, Allendale grocer, was wounded slightly in the knee.

Escape Delays Plea In Scottsboro Trial

Decatur, Ala., Jan. 16 (U.P.).—Escape of a white prisoner from the Morgan County Jail, where the nine Scottsboro defendants were being held, today, disrupted schedules for arguments on a defense motion for a change of venue in the famous trials.

Judge W. W. Callahan today postponed until Monday, arguments on the petition. The delay was ordered to permit the defendants to be brought here.

The nine colored youths were taken to Birmingham yesterday following dismissal of seven special guards after a white prisoner held in the jail escaped.

The trial of Haywood Patterson, first of the youths to open his fourth fight for life, is scheduled to begin Monday. It was indicated the trial would open on schedule, despite the delay in arguments for a change of venue.

Laval Survives Chamber Vote, But Test Nears

Radical Socialists Condemn Policies; Showdown Is Expected January 19.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 16.—Premier Pierre Laval's cabinet kept intact against renewed attacks of left wing enemies through a 315-to-251 vote of confidence today from the Chamber of Deputies.

The vote, on Laval's refusal to accept new debate on his foreign and domestic policies, was regarded in chamber lobbies as less of a victory than a truce until the premier returns from the sessions of the League Council next week.

Increasing discord among members of the Radical Socialist Party, which holds the balance of power in the chamber, overshadowed the attack on Laval.

The vote was brought about by the Radical Socialists, who condemned Laval's policies in a caucus.

After this show of hostility, the Laval majority wavered on asking ministers of the party to resign from the cabinet or voting the Premier out of office.

A showdown is likely January 19, when the election of Edouard Daladier, anti-Laval leader and chief of the Left Wing Radical Socialists, to the presidency of the party, is considered certain. Edouard Herriot, minister of state, resigned as president because of party criticism of Laval.

Daladier is the only candidate. Herriot having resisted the urging of friends that he quit the cabinet and resume leadership of the party.

Debate preceding the vote was disorderly and bitter. A split in the Radical Socialist ranks once again saved Laval's government.

At one time the chamber session was suspended for 15 minutes because of the disorder. Laval's majority of 63 was higher than the one he obtained just before the Christmas recess, which was a bare 20 votes.

Filipino Department Voids 31 Oil Leases

Manila, Philippine Islands, Jan. 16 (AP).—Ten oil leases granted the Standard Vacuum Co. and 21 granted 12 domestic corporations were declared illegal and canceled today by the commonwealth department of commerce. The cabinet approved the action.

The department announced a justice department report indicated certificates of incorporation were issued to the domestic corporations apparently without consideration of stock ownership. Control of the companies was said to be in violation of corporation laws restricting the ownership control of mining corporations and of provisions limiting leasing of mining areas.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 16 (AP). A demonstration against Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, of Austria by Socialists and Communists was frustrated today when police detoured the train on which the chancellor was arriving for what has been described as an economic mission.

A mob had gathered at the station in response to handbills.

As a precautionary measure, Schuschnigg's hotel was guarded heavily.

Fourteen of the fleet's biggest submarines had set out yesterday for the maneuvers, in advance of the remainder of the warships.

Malone and Myers were asked to testify in Hauptmann's defense at his trial for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, but did not do so.
